Big egos threaten WKRP's happy cast

Success has brought discontent on the set of "WKRP in Cincinnati," as some of the stars demand special treatment. The cast, headed by Howard Hesseman, left, Loni Anderson and Richard Sanders, is no longer one big happy family. Page 32.

Man's wacky backyard is dinosaur playground

Martin Pugsley is a quiet, easy-going old country boy with an incredibly wacky hobby — he builds lifelike dinosaurs in his backyard.

And the amazing creatures of the past are so real and menacing, that stunned motorists often stop to gawk in bug-eyed awe.

But to the children who live near Pugsley's home in Hanston, Tex., the "monsters" are anything but frightening. Instead, they are playmates that bring happy hours of fun and exercise.

"I guess they've given a few people a real shock. They've been doing that for years," Pugsley admits with a chuckle. "But it's me and the kids that really enjoy them.

"The kids like to climb on them and I just like having them around. They've been here, most of 'em, for quite a few years."

The oldest of Pugsley's creations — the one he admits he's "fondest" of — is a 16-foot, toothy giant with a "hide" painted, ripped and scarred by years of faithful service as the bizarre playmate of countless neighborhood children.

Pugsley began his wacky dinosaur-building hobby when one of his sons needed help for a school project.

"He said my boys started it all about 21 years ago," Pugsley recalled for The NEWS. "One of my boys had to make a dinosaur as part of his classwork. So we made one out of mothballs. That gave us the idea to build a larger one. But it didn't last too long because it was kinda frail.

"I started experimenting with different materials and finally came up with copper wire that I worked into the shape I wanted. Then I stretched wire mesh over the frame and covered it with roofing cement. It worked real fine.

"I make the legs out of thick barrier wire so they can support the kids when they're climbing," he added.

The next kids took such delight in the creatures that he gradually added to his incredible herd. Now his grandchildren play on them every chance they get.

"And I don't mind one bit," the 58-year-old Texan declared. "That's exactly what they're there for. But I do need to get upset when the kids poked sticks into them.

"Then one day I realized that the boys were playing like they were knights fighting off a terrible dragon to save their lady fair. Now I know it's all in fun and doesn't hurt anyone."

Crazy money-hungry mutt tests master's patience by eating $12,000 check

A crazy mutt was in enough trouble for occasionally eating a dollar bill or two — but when goofy Finnigan gobbled up a $12,000 cashier's check his master raised plenty of ruff!

E.M. Edwards Jr. of Virginia Beach, Va., says he once caught his brisk mutter with half of a $20 bill in his mouth.

And money now and then disappeared from the table beside his bed.

To put Finnigan to the test, Edwards says he dropped a $1 bill on the floor — and Finnigan went for it like a shot.

Then one day Edwards, a good old salesman, got a $12,000 cashier's check at his closing room table and turned his back.

Chomp! The late Finnigan had polished it off without a thank.

Edwards is still trying to get the $12,000 replaced.

Obliging thief lets victim call cops

Timothy Marshall, 24, was busily running a service station when the attendant asked him if he could make one telephone call.

Thereby figured it was the least he could do to be agreed ... then ran away in a panic when the attendant dialed the Rose, Nev., cops.

Obliging Timothy was caught a couple of blocks away from the service station.

Lovesick ape kisses woman

A lovesick orangutan grabbed a naked woman who was about to take a bath in a river — and kissed her wetly on the mouth.

The woman screamed and hauled dead away in the jungle near Jakarta, Indonesia. The ape escaped into the brush.

Villagers heard her screams and found her unconscious on the river bank and took her home.

Tiny town confuses big city crooks

Two big city hoodlums went to a little town to burglarize a store and got caught up in a lot of bad luck.

First, while the Kansas City, Kans., town were in the Greyday, Kans., store two local men into the car with out of town license plates parked in the darkened alley — as they took the keys.

When the pair started to load their car with stolen goods, they discovered that their keys were missing and both made a run for it.

One kidnapped a man and his wife and was caught in a chase with police. The man was a city marshall.

The other thief made a fancy sprint out and would have gotten away except he had to stop for gas — and couldn't find the gas tank cap. He was busily thumbing through the pages of the owner's manual when cops grabbed him.

Couple advertises to get rid of son

A couple got tired of their 31-year-old son living at home so they took out a newspaper ad begging a woman to marry him and take him off their hands.

"American girls! Kenny Dunn is 31 today and still available," read the ad placed by Jake and Jane Dunn in Centerville, Ohio.

Man dazes through his own accident

A man had too much to drink and asked pass passengers to wake him after he slept it off in his car. The four pasty tried to wake him up a couple hours later, but he wouldn't budge. So they jumped in his car — and finally gunned it down the street. It rolled down a hill and crashed into a building. Cops woke up the drunk when they reached the scene.

Disco music makes mice homosexual

Disco music will turn a macho mouse into a homosexual!

That's the astounding result of studies at Argyan University in Lincoln, Tenter.

A spokesman for the university researchers says mice exposed to disco music for hours at a time, several days a week, showed the homosexual traits.

The scientists, however, were unable to explain why the music had the strange effect on the mice and expressed concern that they might do the same to humans.

Kitty wasn't dying — just boozing

A young couple thought their pet kitten was dying when it awakened them crashing around the house, screaming in hand oil and frothing at the mouth — but it was only dead drunk.

Elliot and Bill Kemp of Citizen Park, N.Y., dressed hurriedly, called a veterinarian and rushed to meet him at his office in the dead of night.

The vet put the cat on the floor to observe it and it marched headlong into a wall — and collapsed.

The vet pronounced the cat drunk.

Elliot and Bill went home and found a broken bottle of booze

'It was all bright and golden and . . . so delicately beautiful'

Burned alive woman flirts with death and nears heaven's gates

By RICK DONOVAN

Doused with gasoline and turned into a human torch by her husband, Donna Brown journeyed halfway to heaven before she pulled herself back to the realm of the living.

Her husband Joseph is now serving a 20-year prison sentence for the fiendish act that sentenced Donna to her own prison — the skintight body suit that keeps her hurriedly charred flesh from burning.

The nightmarish events that launched the 26-year-old mother on her odyssey to heaven unfolded one night when she and Joseph became embroiled in a bitter argument in their apartment in Roanoke, Va.

As the vicious quarrel raged on, Joseph exploded in a rage.

"He flung Donna down on the floor and doused her with gasoline. Then he just touched her off with a match," Roanoke Police Lt. James Vale recalled for The NEWS. "Then, when he realized what he had done — the seriousness of his act — he tried to extinguish the flames.

"But, of course, by that time it was too late. She was pretty badly burned. She's lucky she's alive today."

Although doctors at the University of Virginia Hospital held little hope that she would live through her ghastly ordeal, they struggled feverishly to snatch the faint spark of life that still flickered in Donna's pain-ravaged body. It was then that she began her journey to heaven!

"I was lying in the bed in the hospital and there was so much pain. I didn't think I would live through it," Donna recalled. "I turned my head and looked out the window.

"All I could see was a beautiful, sparkling horizon. It was all bright and golden and there were miles and miles of golden wheat. It was so delicately beautiful."

Donna said the next thing she knew was that she was walking on a path leading to the horizon and that the pain that had tortured her body was gone.

"I felt like I was floating along. I felt so wonderful — so much at peace," she continued. "But as I floated along the path, I could hear a voice behind me urging me to come back.

"I thought it was Satan calling. But I wanted to reach the horizon. I knew that once I got beyond the horizon, I would be in heaven.'

Then, as suddenly as she had found herself on the path, Donna was back in her hospital bed, back with the doctors and the nurses — and the pain that was to be her constant torment.

"I got halfway to that golden horizon," Donna added.

"I never thought I'd see it. But I did. It was so beautiful!"

Now, back in the mortal world, Donna has a harder path to travel and it will take her through years of painful skin grafts and plastic surgery before she can shed her protective mask and body suit and step into society.

"I've learned I have a great deal to live for," she explained. "I have my little boy Lonnie to live for. I have my parents to live for. And, I have God."

Burn victim Donna Brown wears a skintight protective suit under her robe to protect her skin from scarring and damage while she recovers from her ordeal.

Air Force brass punishes hero of missile silo blast

Sgt. Jeffrey Kennedy tried to stop the blast — and barely escaped with his life as when this missile silo exploded.

By MICKEY McGUIRE

A young Air Force father of two who risked his life trying to prevent the tragic explosion of a Titan II missile, has been officially reprimanded for his heroic act.

The missile was demolished in a thunderous blast on Sgt. Jeffrey Kennedy emerged from the second courageous descent into the underground silo located 18 miles north of Little Rock, Ark.

Senior Airman David Livingston, who accompanied Kennedy, was killed in the September explosion which injured 20 others. The force of the blast hurled Kennedy 150 feet and he suffered a fractured leg and severe lung injuries.

For his fearless but futile act of bravery, Kennedy earned a stern letter of reprimand from "by-the-book" Air Force officials who claim he disobeyed a superior officer's direct order not to go into the doomed silo.

"I have the Air Force. I've served for six years," the 25-year-old quality control technician told The NEWS. "Then I got that reprimand, it was just like the Air Force gave me a kick in the gut!"

Two other airmen involved in the shocking explosion — Master Sgt. Gary Franson and Senior Airman Charles Heinemann — also received letters of reprimand. But Franson's rebuttal was accepted and the reprimand was withdrawn.

The Air Force also charged Airman David Powell with disobeying orders for using a ratchet wrench instead of the newly required torque wrench inside the silo.

Powell, who had been working for more than 12 hours at the time, dropped the 9-pound wrench and it punctured the fuel tank of the 10-year-old Titan II missile.

In his testimony before the accident investigation board, Kennedy admitted he disobeyed an order from Col. James Morris not to enter the silo to take pressure readings of the fuel and oxidizer tanks. Vapors were billowing from the silo.

"I took it upon myself, under orders from nobody, to enter the [illegible] to get those pressure readings," Kennedy explained. "I thought at the time that the tank's readings were of the utmost importance.

"My last reading showed the tank pressure was 14 pounds above normal. There was no doubt in my mind that an explosion was seconds away."

Kennedy was just emerging from the silo when it exploded.

"All I remember was hearing it go off," he said. "Then I was flying through the air and rolling. I can remember getting wet and wanting to spit and not being able to breathe anything.

"I remember seeing stuff falling all around me and I was praying to God that none of it would fall on me. I'm lucky I'm still alive! But for people who don't believe in God, He was there with me that night."

But if Sgt. Kennedy had it all to do over again, would he still disobey an order if he thought the lives of his buddies depended on his action?

"Yes! I'd do it again! In a moment's notice. I wouldn't do anything any different!"

Docs discover watching fish is a cure for stress

Watching fish in a tank can be good for your health, say three top doctors.

The researchers, members of the University of Pennsylvania's School of Medicine, discovered in experiments that watching fish is a surefire way to beat stress.

After getting 100 people to stand alone for one minute — a known way to increase stress — they placed half the panicked volunteers in a room with fish in an aquarium and the other half in a room with an aquarium with bubbles, pebbles and plants, but no fish.

Those who watched the fish swimming showed a dramatic drop in blood pressure.

"It isn't swimming that's particular in fish," explained Dr. Aaron Katcher, associate professor of psychiatry at the prestigious medical school.

"Anytime someone watches what's going on around them rather than worrying, thinking, turning things over in their mind, they'll relax.

"It's the same as looking at fire in a fireplace — it's constantly changing, but consistently the same — and it captures the person's attention.

Or you could compare it to looking at waves hitting the shore, or listening to repetitive, non-arousing music."

But the researchers, members of the Center for the Interaction of Animals and Society, focused their experiments on fish swimming in a tank because aquariums are fairly easy and inexpensive.

"In earlier studies, we had already established that blood pressure was lower when a person greeted and stroked a dog than when they were sitting and resting," Dr. Katcher said.

"So wanted to check with another pet that had nothing to do with touching and talking, but just watching, and what we found was that there was almost the same magnitude of change as with meditation or biofeedback."

Added another researcher on the project, Dr. Alan Beck: "It turns out when you watch fish, you relax."

Other studies have shown that heart attack survivors live longer if they have a dog

Zoo freezes exotic animal embryos for birth a million years from now

Embryos of exotic animals are being put on ice so they can be born a million years from now.

The amazing procedure is being done to ensure that future zoos will contain animals that would have otherwise disappeared from the face of the earth.

Dr. Kurt Benirschke, a researcher at the San Diego Zoo, says there's no reason that the embryos — quick frozen with liquid nitrogen — won't keep forever.

Dr. Benirschke says scientists get eggs collected from other animals are combined to produce a test tube embryo that is then frozen and stored.

The storing and transplantation of the living embryos is so easy that some of the near future may order a mixed dozen of lion, tiger, bear and giraffe embryos as easily as picking up a carton of eggs at the grocery store.

And still more incredible, these animals won't necessarily be born by a mother of the same species.

Dr. Benirschke foresees the day when a lion will give birth to a Siberian tiger by way of the embryo transplants — and when common domestic cattle, horses and pigs will give birth to exotic or endangered African species.

Another spinoff of this future-shock research is that it has been possible to split the fertilized eggs so that twins, triplets, or even exactly identical quadruplets will be born.

Rare animals like this red panda, loaned to the San Diego Zoo by China, prompted the embryo-freezing technique.

Already a cow has been born of a frozen embryo implant, a monkey embryo has been successfully transplanted in a horse and recently the San Diego Zoo just narrowly missed transplanting an exotic Corsican goat embryo into a rare Barbados sheep. Next time zoo researchers feel they will be successful if they let the embryos develop longer in the original mother.

"There is no reason to believe these embryos cannot be kept forever," said the German-accented Dr. Benirschke. "At the temperature of liquid nitrogen at minus 196 centigrade there is no metabolic activity." Already embryos have been frozen 10 years and the only limitation has been that liquid nitrogen has not been available much longer than that.

Transporting the exotic animal embryos will be simple. "All you need is a bottle of liquid nitrogen," said Dr. Benirschke. Then it will no longer be necessary to elaborately create an exotic animal and need a keeper and a supply of its food at enormous expense. Risk of disease

Loyal dog scampers a mile with note tied to collar to get help for woman in labor

A local man scampered a mile with a note tied to his collar to get help for a helpless woman having a premature baby.

Marion Holmes, whose pet hound was never on [illegible], says she was tolled by [illegible] in her Brighton, England, home.

But pet named Scamp saved her and she frantically wrote a note: "Strong pains — come quickly." She tied the note to Scamp's neck and told him to go to her mother's house.

Strong scurried through the streets and arrived panting at the home of Marion's mother, who called an ambulance.

Four hours later Marion gave birth to a five-pound boy.

Split pees ease peanut shortage

Faced with the drought-caused peanut shortage, food processors have come up with an amazing peanut butter substitute — split pea butter.

The Dunsin food Co. came up with the idea of grinding up plentiful split peas then adding peanut flavor to create a fake peanut butter.

The developers say the smell stinks and even simulates the crunchy peanut butter.

Travellers pack better for weather

Motorists worried about the weather and road conditions ahead can simply push a button at an interstate highway rest stop and get the latest information.

The service is available to travellers through loops where microwaves and video screens pose a threat to motorists.

The Iowa Highway Patrol and the U.S. Weather Bureau combine efforts to produce all the up-to-date information that is broadcast over FM radio. The broadcasts can either be received over a radio or at the rest stop centers.

Girl publishes teddy bear paper

A 14-year-old girl's collection of 100 teddy bears launched her on a publishing career — she is the boss of The Teddy Tribune, an international paper for stuffed bear fans.

Barbara Walters says the official editor of the paper is Oompa, the cub bear in her collection. But, stored in the bear rooms of her home in Philadelphia, are other great bears like Bear Chase and Douglas Bearbanks teddy bear.

"People think it's silly and childish — and it is," says Barbara. "That's why bear collectors are so happy there are others around. Their neighbors think they are crazy."

Picture identifies amnesia victim

A woman found her brother who had been missing 18 weeks after she saw a picture of an amnesia victim in a newspaper — and it was he! Pam Conner of Seattle, Wash., immediately notified authorities it was her brother, Ed, who was undergoing treatment at a San Diego, Calif., hospital where he had told police he remembered nothing of his past.

Depressed people are facing reality

Depressed people feel bad because they know what's really going on!

That's the conclusion of a research psychologist who says skeptical, happy-go-lucky people feel good because they don't look reality square in the face.

Professor Lauren Alloy of Northwestern University says his findings are just exactly opposite of what psychologists usually thought.

Baby boom blamed on Mt. St. Helens

The Mt. St. Helens volcano has touched off a baby boom.

Tom Healey, supervisor of the maternity ward in Deaconess Hospital in Spokane, Wash., claims births normally shooting suddenly nine months after the volcano erupted.

When the volcano erupted last May people in the area were confined to their homes for days.

"I remember at the time saying we would have to keep track of the period nine months after the ash fell," says Joe Morris, administrator of the Kootenai Memorial Hospital in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

Townspeople cheer lonely, injured girl

A little girl lay in a car near the end of her family's vacation was left lonely in the hospital when her parents went home. But, high-hearted townspeople changed all that.

Erin Elam, 5, was hospitalized in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and her mom, Marsha Ring, stayed with her two weeks after the rest of the family went home to Kalispell, Mont. But then Marsha, too, had to go home and leave the child to recover alone.

A great-grandmother, Maureen Reeder, read of the little girl and organized a clean-up squad. Toys and visitors soon crowded the little girl's hospital room.

"I was born and raised in Kalispell," says Maureen. "My heart just went out to that little girl."

The man who soared with eagles

The face of a man who has spoken with eagles. Lyman Gilmore may have flown before the Wright brothers.

Lyman Gilmore secretly flew an airplane — 19 months before the Wright brothers

By GWEN YOUNT CARDEN

An eccentric inventor who rummaged through garbage cans and never bathed flew his engine powered airplane 19 months before the Wright brothers.

But because he was such a secretive person, Lyman Gilmore — who once said he wanted to learn the secrets of the eagles — was robbed of his place in history, say residents of Grass Valley, Calif., where several of his flights took place.

The world might never have known of Gilmore's historic flight had historians not dug up four typewritten manuscript pages describing the man's accomplishments.

Amazingly, they told of a flight which took place on May 15, 1902, when the aviation pioneer flew a 36-foot open monoplane glider, powered by a steam engine.

The Wright brothers didn't get off the ground until Dec. 17, 1903.

According to the documents, signed by Gilmore, he launched his aircraft down a chute 150 yards long and continued on his own power for some time.

The paper said he made several flights that year, some lasting as long as 45 minutes.

"I believe Gilmore flew long before the Wright brothers," said Dr. Ulalmer E. Berg, a historian who lives in Grass Valley.

"We know that he kept a log every day. He would have had no reason to make up the story. That man didn't want publicity, anyway.

"Some may doubt this and claim his plane actually glided along, but I strongly believe he did fly on his own power."

And much of Grass Valley seems to agree with Dr. Berg.

"If you ask people around here, most of them will say he was first," claims Carol Peters, Executive Manager of the Grass Valley Chamber of Commerce.

This strange man, who wanted to "rob from the eagle the eagle's secret," also designed the first commercial airplane and founded the first commercial airport in the West.

Shortly after World War I, he swore he would never marry, cut his hair, bathe or shave until William Jennings Bryan was elected to the presidency.

He kept his vow.

But he died filthy, bearded, shaggy-haired and a bachelor in 1961 at the age of 74.

Sadly, Gilmore remains as much a mystery in death as in life.

Shrouded in a blanket of typical Gilmore secrecy, his papers lay covered and tightly guarded by his heirs who still live in Grass Valley.

No one has been able to convince them to make his writings public.

Whether Lyman Gilmore was the first man to fly or not, the words of Tennyson could be applied to him: "Angels have talked with him, and shouted into thunder . . ."

Virginian-Pilot.

A December 1902 newspaper story tells of the first powered flight in history — by the Wright brothers.

Gilmore's hangar around 1907. The aircraft at left was built to carry eight passengers and the one at right is an early Gilmore monoplane with an internal combustion engine.

Incredible coincidence stuns identical twins as they give birth on same day

Identical twin sisters, expecting babies almost two months apart, astonishingly gave birth on the same day.

Sandra Rosenberg and Sarah Morgan have dressed alike, worn their hair alike and have been almost inseparable over the years. But their incredible timing has now added a new dimension to their togetherness.

"We never dreamed it would happen on the same day," Sandra told The NEWS. "Our babies were due so far apart it was a real surprise."

Sandra's baby wasn't expected for five weeks when her labor pains started. At 10:35 a.m. on February 4, she brought Neal Ryan Rosenberg into the world. He weighed five pounds, 15 ounces.

Her sister, Sarah Morgan, who was two weeks overdue, followed at 6:45 p.m. with Stephanie Lynn Morgan. Stephanie weighed in at seven pounds 10 ounces.

This is not the first time the look-alike two have amazed people in the obstetrics ward — 19 years ago, their mother went into labor expecting one child and brought home two.

The new babies, born in Carteret, N.J., at the Cooper Medical Center, strikingly resemble each other. They have navy eyes another and will be seeing a lot of each other over the years.

"They'll probably grow up more like sister and brother than cousins," Sandra said.

The sisters competed against each other when they were younger, but now they're best friends.

And that's how their babies will grow, they probably will spend a lot of time comparing notes on who walks and talks first.

"We'll have the children's birthday parties together of course," Sarah said with a bright grin.

Both sisters plan to have more children in the future, but "not for a while," Sandra added quickly.

Asked if their next child will be born on the same day, they answered: "We couldn't do it again if we tried."

You can be friends with a spider

Dear Pet Talk: My uncle brought me a tarantula to be caught in the New Mexico desert. It is very furry with pretty rusty-colored bands on its legs. My mother is scared of it. Will I be able to tame it?

Spider's Friend,
Akron, Ohio

Dear Friend: You can make friends with a tarantula. Keep it in an old aquarium or similar glass-sided cage.

Don't let it get cold or sit in a draft. Any old aquarium should have a weighted, screened top with bark chips on the bottom. Feed your spider with live crickets or meal worms. The local pet store can supply you with these.

Your tarantula will learn to recognize you when you feed it. Always approach it slowly and gently and never startle it — that's when it bites. Soon you'll have it scrupping your hand in the cage. Its bite is about as poisonous as a bee sting.

Cats are safe with babies

Dear Pet Talk: In a month I'll be having our first child. My mother is driving me crazy, telling me that our cat will get into the crib and smother the baby. I've had my Siamese for five years and it is part of the family.

First-time Mom,
Boulder, Colo.

Dear Mom: Cats smothering babies is an old wives' tale. Your cat will undoubtedly try to get into the crib with the baby, however, because the baby is nice and warm.

When the baby is very young, and can't roll away, you might want to tie coarse fish netting over the crib. Your pet is likely to be jealous of the new arrival so give him equal attention and loving for the first month or so.

Problems with puppy puddles

Dear Pet Talk: My six-month-old puppy is almost housebroken. She's trying very hard, but sometimes she forgets, and it is always on the carpet. How can I clean the carpet stains?

Proud Puppy Owner,
Brownsville, Tex.

Dear Puppy Owner: Club soda is probably the most efficient — and cheapest — spot remover you can use. Pour a little on a cloth, and dab gently at the stain. Don't get the spot too wet. Blot it as you go with a dry towel. Continue dabbing with soda and blotting until the stain is gone.

Club soda works equally well whether it's fresh or stale.

Dog hairs on the furniture

Dear Pet Talk: How can I train my collie not to get on the furniture? It's gotten so that every time I sit on anything in the living room, I get covered with dog hairs. I worry that all the furniture, from an outing to I go on the attention on it again.

Dog Lover,
Fayetteville, N.C.

Dear Dog Lover: Your problem probably started when you brought home your precious little puppy and allowed it to crawl all over your lap while you sat in your favorite chair.

Give your collie its own large soft bed. Pet suppliers make one like a lounge chair with a removable, washable cover.

When you leave the house, turn all the sofa and chair cushions on their sides, or cover upholstered furniture with old sheets or curtains. If none of this works give your dog a good brushing every day. At least this way he won't shed quite so much.

This hamster's not to trot

Dear Pet Talk: I got a hamster and a cage for my birthday, she's very tame, but when I'm not playing with him, especially at night, he does nothing but run back and forth, along the edge of his cage. Is he trying to get out?

Charlie's Friend,
Amarillo, Tex.

Dear Charlie's Friend: Your hamster is bored. You need to give him something to do.

Buy him an exercise wheel especially for hamsters at the pet store. Hamsters are nocturnal animals, so he'll probably play on it all night long.

You can also tear a sheet of newspaper into quarters, ball up the sections, and put a few of them in the cage. Hamsters love to shake newsprint, so he'll busy himself for hours shredding paper and making and remaking a nest.

Erik Estrada tops incredible News poll

America's sexiest men

Singer Tom Jones makes women go wild when he sings.

Robert Urich is one of TV's hottest stars.

Neil Diamond scored high in the poll.

The big winner was Erik Estrada, top. Also ranking high was "Dukes of Hazzard" star Tom Wopat, right.

Who's the sexiest man in America? That's the question we asked our readers and here's their answer — Erik Estrada.

The macho star of "CHiPs" was overwhelmingly the winner in The NEWS poll, although four other hunky stars also scored high — superstar singers Tom Jones and Neil Diamond, "Vegas" star Robert Urich and Tom Wopat, star of "The Dukes of Hazzard."

Wendy Hamman, a NEWS reader from San Diego, said, "When Erik's on TV, nothing else in the world matters. All he has to do is smile once and my week is complete."

Gloria Phillips of Blaine, Minn., had only this to say of Erik:

"What a knockout!"

Another reader from Decatur, Mich., voted for Wopat. "Tom's so adorable," she wrote. "I would just love to cuddle up with him by a fireplace."

Wrote Barbara Meyer from Indianapolis, Ind., "There is probably nobody with more sex appeal than Tom Jones. He's my favorite."

Teresa Marin from Otsego, Mich., named Diamond. The star of the "The Jazz Singer," America's sexiest man.

"I'd love to see him 24 hours a day," she wrote.

9-year-old boy spent 3 terrible hours trapped in the . . .

Icy jaws of death

By GWEN TOUNT CARSON

For more than three terrifying hours a 9-year-old boy lay helplessly wedged in a tomb of ice on a deserted winter beach.

Trapped three feet under the surface of a massive ice ridge, Adam Rosenzweig screamed for help — but his thin cries were shattered by the wind and pounded into a feeble whisper by the roar of the surf.

The boy knew he could not hope to struggle free . . . he also knew the freezing cold would eventually kill him as surely as a knife to the heart.

The only chance he had of surviving this horror was that someone, somewhere, would hear his voice.

And Adam Rosenzweig knew that was hardly any chance at all . . .

The boy's ordeal began on February 19 when Adam went to visit the beachfront park in Whitefish Bay, Wis., to get rocks for a school project. He and other pupils from his school were warned to stay away from the closed shoreline.

The temptation proved to be too much, however, and Adam slid down the hill onto the ice-covered beach. A bad winter storm had left a thick ridge of ice running near the edge of Lake Michigan, and at 4 p.m. Adam fell through it.

"I put my foot down on some ice I didn't see, and slipped into the crevice," he said. "I was stuck. There was a big chunk of ice blocking me and I couldn't move my feet."

As the icy fingers of the ridge held Adam in a death grip, the sun went down, plunging the beach into darkness.

Nearby he heard the angry waves of the lake pounding the shore. The boy thought they would cover the ridge and drown him.

Meanwhile, Adam's mother was panicking — her son had never come home so late.

Her husband Gerald and police officer James Schroeder mounted a search for the wandering boy, spotting Adam's bicycle near the stairs going down to the beach. They braced themselves against the howling wind and began to search the beach.

For one desperate hour the men called Adam's name as their flashlights gutted hopeful fingers at the broken slabs of ice and debris.

Suddenly, a splash of blue against the ice caught officer Schroeder's eye.

Running to the edge of a 12-inch gap in an ice ridge he spotted the shivering boy.

But Adam's ordeal was far from over.

The rescuers knew they were working against time as the temperature in the crevice plunged towards freezing. They kept the boy talking, hoping to keep him alive.

Adam couldn't be pulled out by brute force because the ice had already closed around his slim body.

But then firefighter David Kraemer went head-first into the hole with a rope tied to his feet.

For 30 minutes he chipped desperately away at the resistant ice-walls, and it wasn't until 6 p.m. that he was finally able to lift the boy, blue and half-frozen, to safety.

Amazingly, Adam had no major injuries and he was released after just one night in the hospital. "It's a miracle he's alive," said a grateful Mrs. Linda Rosenzweig. "It's a miracle he had only minor injuries and a minute he was wearing that blue helmet."

Mrs. Rosenzweig said The NEWS that before Adam left that day she had tried to talk him out of wearing his helmet, a plastic souvenir of the Milwaukee Brewers. "He wouldn't go for it and it's a good thing he didn't," she said. "That helmet saved his life."

According to young Adam he did a lot of praying while trapped in that awful hole, and he says he learned a very important lesson.

"I'll never go back to that beach, and I'll mind my mother from now on," he said.

Young Adam relaxes after his ordeal. He has now promised his mother he will never go near the shore of the lake again.

Tony's your ideal tailor—if you want to get dressed up to kill

Tony Pinkerney's customers are dressed to kill — in his custom-made suits of medieval armor.

Tony, seen at right making on a 13th century war sword, can run you up a suit of steel suit for a mere $1,125.

But if you want a replica of the armor the Black Prince wore at the battle of Crecy in 1346 you'll have to shell out around $2,000.

Museums and private collectors are the English armorer's biggest customers, but dozens of military enthusiasts from this country find their way to his forge in the village of Ramsden, Oxfordshire.

"Recently an American firm asked me to make 50 suits of armor for their salesmen," Tony said. "But I had to turn them down.

"They wanted the suits in three months, but it would have taken me five years. Each complete harness takes four to six weeks to make and has 300 moving parts to allow normal body movement.

"You just can't hurry the process."

Tony uses the same methods as the great armorers of the 15th century, shaping the steel sheets with a hammer and melting the knee and elbow joints around a cannonball.

"I really can't call myself an armorer yet," he said. "In medieval times a man had to serve a 12- or 14-year apprenticeship. I've only been doing it for nine."

Tony's suits are a mixture of genuine antique pieces and modern reproductions, but he insists that even the latter are not cheap.

"Even though I have a forge and all the equipment, it's still very time-consuming and expensive," he said. "I've been working on one suit for the past two years, and I've still got another year to go before it's finished."

Tony said that in ancient times buying a horse and armor was like buying a house, car and color TV set . . . as expensive as setting up a modern home.

No wonder that a broken sword or dead horse could spell ruin to an impoverished knight.

Tony, who is a keen student of history, has no illusions about the harsh steel-lined days of old. "The warfare was brutal, but the craftsmanship was beautiful," he said.

But a word of warning to any potential knights — a full suit of armor weighs 50 to 60 pounds, and it feels like an oven in summer.

Bo Derek tells how her husband makes his women slaves of love

By ELLEN RAE

Sizzling sex symbol Bo Derek has revealed the secret magic that her husband John uses to make love slaves of the world's most beautiful and desirable women.

[redacted] at 28 years, the now [redacted]ood, but still married [redacted]ther Derek has mush- [redacted]typical doll and [redacted] world's richest boy- [redacted]ends Andrews. Linda [redacted] now carry Bo, the

"John appreciates women more than anybody I've ever heard of . . ."

Amazingly, John not only has puppet-master control over Bo, but ex-wives Linda and Ursula will cling to him for support and advice.

And, they openly admit they still love him.

How does he do it? Bo and Linda say John is a master manipulator of love magic who constantly uses love's greatest weapon — romance.

Instead of playing hard to get or bullying his women around like a macho tough guy, John pushes his lovers with attention and love.

"He is always thinking about me," said Bo, her cheeks flushing at the thought of her husband.

"We had a 24-hour relationship and he is and was that way with Ursula and with Linda when he was with them."

The silver-haired Derek lets his women know that they are the very center of his universe.

"He used to say with Ursula 'This is not my wife, she is my life.'

"And it's true," Bo confessed in an interview with TV talk host Mike Douglas.

"Now, I am John's whole life. He is always thinking about me.

"Everything has to do with me, as in my life, everything I think about has to do with him."

One of Derek's love tricks is to present his beloved with little surprise presents — [redacted] while he makes with his own hands.

"He makes little things," says Bo.

"You get up in the morning and he'll be in his little work room making you something . . . uh, buckles or belts or if I need a hair comb, he'll make one a half hour."

Derek even bedazzled with his hands the sexy rawhide bikini Bo wore when she posed in "Playboy" and is making the costume she'll sport in John in her upcoming "Tarzan" film.

The lavish attention Derek focuses on his woman pays off. They literally give themselves up to him until ending up treating and following his wishes.

"In some ways, he is a dictator," she confessed, "but I'm so willing.

"I think that so many young women would love to be told what looks better on them, what things to present, how to behave, etc.

"John appreciates women more than anybody I've ever heard of.

"He appreciates the nice things in women, their intelligence as well as physical beauty and the independence.

"But I am dependent on him. I love him and I — in the day like with Ursula — I think that she needs to be able to call upon him . . ."

John Derek was criticized for throwing over Bo during her interview with Barbara Walters, above. But Bo, below left, says that's part of John's magic which keeps her as close — Ursula Andrews, below right, and Linda Evans — in love with him and friendly with each other.

Ghostly happenings terrify cast of 'Mommie Dearest'

By KITTY McNAB

A series of mysterious and spooky happenings are terrifying actress Faye Dunaway and crew members on the set of "Mommie Dearest" — the movie version of the vicious book about late film star Joan Crawford.

Some sources wonder whether Joan's ghost is trying to keep the film from being made.

"It's absolutely eerie," said an insider. "It's like having a ghost on the set."

The most shocking incident occurred just as superstar Faye entered her dressing room at the Paramount lot.

Without warning and for no reason, a hanging picture of Joan and her daughter Christina, who wrote the nasty book, suddenly crashed to the floor.

The noise and surprise nearly plunged the actress into a hysterical panic.

But that's not all.

● Costly specialty made gowns have mysteriously vanished from Faye's wardrobe.

● Scripts had to be rushed after a reel of film came out totally blank in the photo lab.

● Christina suddenly fell apart hysterically and had to be led away from the set.

● Important pages of Faye's script have mysteriously disappeared.

Spooky, huh?

Amazing Relief for Arthritis, Rheumatism Pain Discovered at California Racing Stables

Duarte, CA.—Race tracks are a hard place to look for a cure thing, but Chuck Adams found an incredible one at Santa Anita in California.

The big reason? Anyone who suffers from the agonizing pain and discomfort of arthritis, rheumatism, bursitis or muscular soreness!

Behind discovery of Rel-EEZE, an extraordinary pain reliever originally developed for the horses, aching and lumps that plague those who earn their thoroughbreds.

"Coming across Rel-EEZE was real luck for me and for every man and woman who has arthritis or rheumatism," says Adams, a California horseman. "Most people say it's really amazing."

The story started 14 years ago when Peter Petrich, a veteran employee of the California Thoroughbred Racing Association, thought there ought to be something to help the pain of physical injuries he saw every day at the track. Mr. Petrich, who had had pharmaceutical training as a young man, combined with friends in the School of Pharmacy at the University of Southern California and then went to work on an idea on his spare time. After a long period of trial and error, he finally created a small batch of a greaseless, stainless and odorless lotion which he passed out to trainers, jockeys, owners and other friends at the track.

One of the men who tried Petrich's formula was his old friend Johnny Longden, the all-time great jockey and trainer. Like many in his profession, Longden had developed arthritic pain from the constant physical abuse of his work. When he tried Rel-EEZE, he found that it not only helped ordinary bruises and strains but in his words was a miracle. It also gave him instant temporary relief from arthritis as well.

Before long Rel-EEZE was a standard fixture at the track, with Peter supplying friends and friends of friends. He never thought about making Rel-EEZE available to the public until several years later.

"That's where Chuck Adams came in. "Peter was getting on in years and he wanted to pass the formula along to somebody so this would carry on and continue to help the people who suffer from this terrible disease of arthritis," Adams recalls.

"When we first got together, I was busy as a stockbroker and putting together a 27-acre golf course project in San Juan Capistrano. Frankly, I let Rel-EEZE drift. Peter kept bugging me so I decided to buy the formula from him.

"Now, I have never had any medical training or the pharmaceutical background. I figured I should try it for myself. With his help, I mixed up a small batch and gave the bottles to friends and acquaintances. The results that came back were incredible. Almost without exception everybody said they had gotten very good relief from Rel-EEZE."

"Built on the best of past formulas, a full year was spent [illegible] to help get my mother who has been flagging arthritic. The relief upon immediate. . . . She slept [illegible] soon. We are thrilled beyond words."
D.D.W.

And here's another one that makes my heart feel good.

"To my relation, this product (Rel-EEZE) has given me better results [illegible] than any [illegible] product in this office."
H.F.W.

What's the secret of Rel-EEZE? Adams believes it is the ingredients and the special way they are combined.

"Some of them are exotic and others are very expensive. The formula for mixing them together is very complicated. It has been refined through a lot of experimenting and I think this is the reason Rel-EEZE performs as well as it does. I am involved with the manufacture of every single bottle. I will tell the ingredients that go into the final process personally. I wouldn't have it any other way."

Rel-EEZE now is being used by doctors, chiropractors, orthopedic surgeons and pharmacists across the nation. "They've all told us that it is the finest product on the market," says Adams. "The response from professionals and laymen alike has shown me that miracles can happen, even on race tracks."

Woman's nightmare saves nursing home patients from blazing death

A woman whose dreams foretell the future with astonishing accuracy saved the lives of 37 nursing home patients.

Frances Varnier says she was jarred from a restful sleep at 1 a.m. by a terrifying nightmare — one of the three warning times she envisions was being destroyed by fire.

She tried going back to sleep. But a nagging feeling kept her tossing, turning and wide-eyed all night.

"It was one of the longest nights of my life," she remembered.

As soon as the sun came up, she drove quickly to the Saratoga Place Convalescent Hospital in Saratoga, Calif. Her car screeched to a halt by the front entrance, and she rushed to the room that houses the hospital's water heater.

Mrs. Varnier yanked the door open and a ball of flame leaped out towards her. She gasped in horror and locked the door shut. The gas pipe leading to the water heater had cracked and was flaming.

While the nurses frantically pushed the ill, elderly patients to safety, Mrs. Varnier called the fire department. When volunteers from arrived and extinguished the blaze.

That gas could have blown up at any time and killed everyone," Mrs. Varnier told The NEWS. "The sun would have blown about it until it was too late.

"I think God put that dream in my head. He helped me to save those lives."

This was not the first time Mrs. Varnier's dreams have saved a life. One night she dreamed she was in her car careening out of control down a hill with no brakes.

The next day she checked her brake fluid and was shocked to discover it had all leaked out. "I could easily have been in a serious accident if I hadn't been forewarned by my dreams," she said.

A dream also foretold with startling accuracy the tragic death of her 21-year-old son. In her sleep she saw Phil drowning.

Three days later, it happened — her young son was tragically drowned.

Three live in pain and terror after attack by blazing UFO

By DICK DONOVAN

One of the most terrifying UFO encounters ever in America has left two women and a child trapped in a living nightmare of pain and fear.

Despite exhaustive hospital tests and treatment, baffled medical experts still don't know what to do for their endless physical agony.

The three helpless victims — Betty Cash, Vickie Landrum, and Vickie's 7-year-old son Colby — encountered the thundering, flame-belching UFO as it hovered only a few hundred feet from their car on a remote road near Dayton, Tex.

Within hours of the shrieking horror of that experience, Betty and Vickie's skin turned beet red, their eyes began to burn and tear uncontrollably and the women felt as though they were looking through a murky film.

By morning, Betty's body was covered with hard, reddish-gray bumps, her hair was falling out in handfuls and she was suffering the most agonizing headache she had ever experienced. The mother was so weak from pain she couldn't even get out of bed to call for help.

Within a few days of the encounter, Vickie's chest began hurting. An eye specialist told the frightened 27-year-old that cataracts like films were now forming. "You'll probably be blind in less than a year," he said.

Little Colby, though not suffering any physical injury, screams every night in his sleep, haunted by terrible nightmares.

"Oh, dear God! I don't know what to do . . . I'm at my wits' end," Betty told The NEWS in an exclusive interview. "I need help, and so does Vickie. I look terrible and I'm too sick to work.

"There must be something that can be done to help us," she added as tears welled in her swollen, bloodshot eyes. "But we don't know where to turn."

Their incredible ordeal began one night when they were driving home from a bingo game in Cleveland, a small town about 40 miles north of Dayton.

The awful events that followed will be branded on Vickie's memory forever.

"We were driving down the road at about 9 p.m., when all of a sudden something came down from the sky right ahead of us," Vickie said.

"It looked like the whole sky had split and fire was coming down almost to the road.

"I told Betty, 'You'd better stop! You're going to run right into it!'

"I thought it was the end of the world. It frightened Colby and he started to scream.

"I said, 'Honey, if you see Jesus coming out of the sky, He's coming to carry us to a better place.'

"I had always lived my life so that I'd be ready when my time came. But I still wanted to keep my body from dying.

"Then Betty got out of the car and started walking toward the object. It was as big as a water tank and about a half-mile up in the sky. It started getting real hot in the car, so I rolled the window down and stuck my head out to look at it.

"As Vickie and Colby sat terrified in the car Betty remained outside entranced by the unholy object hovering only a few yards down the road.

"It was the most incredible thing I've ever seen," Betty recalled. "It was shortened shaped and silvery looking. It made a noise like a tornado, but I could hear beeps coming from it. The lights and the heat were so intense!

"I stood out on the road for about five or seven seconds, just staring up at it," Betty continued. "Then it suddenly lifted up and started moving away to the west, toward Houston."

Incredibly, Betty and Vickie said they counted 23 unmarked, double-rotor helicopters maneuvering around the UFO as it began to ascend.

"The thing just lit up the sky like it was daytime and I could see the helicopters plain as anything," Betty declared. "They seemed to be trying to close in on the UFO."

Officials at military bases in and around central Texas told The NEWS their flight records show no large movement of double-rotor helicopters on the night of the encounter.

In another near-hour, the UFO was sighted by three other motorists near Dayton about 30 minutes earlier and 20 miles east of where Betty, Vickie and Colby had their encounter.

"I was in the car with my son Jack, and his wife, Toni, and we were just coming into Dayton," 33-year-old Nellie Zedick told The NEWS. "We could see the lights as we stopped for a moment to look at it.

"It didn't make any noise. But when it moved off, it really moved fast. It was like nothing I

Girl, 11, calmly saves [redacted] with kiss of life technique

Leslie Mauck tells how she saved her mom's life while grandmother Nettie Dettweiler proudly looks on.

A little girl saved her mother's life — using a kiss of life technique she had learned in school only weeks before.

As adults panicked around her, 11-year-old Leslie Mauck coolly took charge, breathing life into her mother. Then rushing next door for help.

"If it hadn't been for that child, my daughter would be dead," said Nettie Dettweiler, Leslie's grandmother.

"I was in a state of confusion. All I could think to do was call the ambulance."

It was 4 a.m. when Nettie heard a dull thud in another room.

She thought a cat had jumped on the roof of her Richardson, Tex., home.

But a nagging uneasiness urged her to check on her daughter, Marilyn, young Leslie's mother.

Nettie quietly opened the door and choked back a scream as Marilyn had had a stroke and was sprawled hideously on the floor.

Leslie's 13-year-old sister, Annette Berry, heard the commotion and rushed into the room.

"Grandmother, she's not breathing . . . she's turning blue," she cried.

At the sound of her sister's terrified shouting, Leslie awoke from a sound sleep, jumped up and rushed to her dying mother's side.

She listened for a heartbeat — there was none.

She immediately gave her mother mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and prayed her chest like she had been taught to in school.

Slowly, her mother started breathing and Leslie whispered a silent prayer. But there were still some things to do.

The young girl remembered there were two nurses living next door. She ran to their house, pounded on their door and led them to her mother.

Within minutes, the ambulance rushed the woman to the hospital. She [redacted] is recovering at Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas, though her arms and legs are still paralyzed.

"I thank the Lord Leslie had the presence of mind to help her mother," said Nettie.

The 4-foot-nine-inch fourth grader cheerfully credits her efforts to practice the technique. "I think that was God's plan."

Gutsy lady golfer fights cancer one day at a time

Courageous golf star Kathy Linney is battling cancer to come out swinging on the course of life.

Three times the terrible, dreaded disease has threatened Kathy's life. Three times the LPGA pro has fought back.

Today, the brave 28-year-old from Tequesta, Fla., plays her golf game like she plays her survival — one day, one swing at a time.

She has lost both breasts to cancer. She has lost much of her chest and arm muscle. She has had a cancerous tumor removed from her leg.

But she has not lost hope — and Kathy's determination to win, to keep on swinging as well off the course, has made her an inspiration to all who know the story of the gentle fighter.

"You've got to believe you can win the fight or you're not going to win it," Kathy told The NEWS.

"Battling cancer is a lot like playing golf. You take it one day at a time, one shot at a time. I don't worry about the long shot over the water three holes from now. I have to stay in and do the best I can with the hole I'm playing."

Kathy's game is survival. She was 23 when cancer was first diagnosed. A malignant tumor was removed from her left leg. It was a year before the after surgery stitches healed and five before she could stop wearing a surgical stocking.

But she finished graduate school and got a master's degree in math, playing golf in the summers for fun.

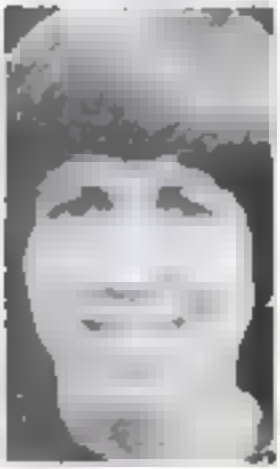
But cancer, playing for keeps forever, the calls it — and Kathy quit her job as a computer analyst in 1979 to make professional golf her career. With little money to use pursuing the Tour, she supported herself with part-time jobs and finally qualified for the LPGA tour in 1984.

She was a rising star — and each day brought new friends for her.

Then, in August 1986, tragedy struck again. Doctors discovered cancer in her right breast.

Kathy lost her breast and much of the surrounding muscle and tissue — a crippling blow to the golfer.

"I had had nine good years



Kathy Linney fights cancer like she plays golf — one challenge at a time — and she's still winning.

[illegible] right at cancer and I would not allow myself to give up," she said.

Months of painful rehabilitation followed and Kathy returned to the Tour.

Entering a tournament is tough for her — playing was victory enough.

Last July, doctors found cancer in her left breast.

A week after cancer was discovered, Kathy signed her biggest ever purse, finishing fourth in the Birmingham Classic.

"When she walked into the clubhouse her competitors on the Tour gave her a standing ovation.

"That moment was really great," Kathy said. "It was the high point of my career. In fact, both breasts were I didn't even have whiskers. I'd love to play to compete again.

"When I do walk on to see the whole world is happy for me. There's no cheering for me as hard as they have and I cannot be more."

A few weeks later Kathy was back in the hospital for surgery. Her left breast was removed.

Two days after she was released, she was out on the course again, hitting chip shots and thinking only of the next stroke.

"If you cry over the Kathy Linney story," says pro Cathartine Duggan, "you haven't been playing attention. She shouldn't make you, but she should make you go out and move mountains."

And you move mountains, said Kathy one rock at a time.

Tiny, stacked cubicles are cheap hotel rooms

A wacky hotel for men where guests sleep in tiny capsules on the outskirts is cheap lodging in a metropolis, Big city.

That's the decision of operators of two Capsule Inns in Japan where the zany idea has caught fire.

The hotel looks like a laundromat — row upon row of plastic capsules stacked two deep. Each capsule is only about four high, three wide and 7 feet long — and they contain a TV set, radio alarm clock and individual air conditioning.

When a guest checks in he's given a locker in which he may change a green robe to wear in the lounge area and is told he can use the rooms in the station.

Cost of a night at a Capsule Inn is $11 — compared to sky-high western style hotels that charge up to $100 a night in Tokyo.

MY AMERICA

By ED ANGER

I'm nervous with that political good-time girl Rita Jenrette.

In case you don't know, Rita is the estranged wife of that Myrtle Beach Democrat, the former Congressman from South Carolina who was convicted of bribery in the Abscam caper.

But Rita's own entanglements don't make her bashful for a cent.

The wife of ex-pol appears in the current issue of that sleazy Playboy. But she's also been touring all about here, mouthing off about her husband and excusing the politician's shenanigans.

I don't know about you, but I'd rather see a mugging victim on the street than hear from Rita. Can we suppose? Accept the premise that a flashy blonde who has flaunted her body for the world to see in that rag pawed by wimpy high school of the Capitol before she was thrown and jumped naked into a hot tub at a political social gathering.

While Americans and their public officials are battling to keep their heads above the rising tide of militarism, this pullulah wildcat is airing her dirty laundry to public, expecting us to applaud.

I certainly don't condone her husband's action in taking a bribe. But I'm even more furious at his wife — the woman who should be mourning by him — telling the whole world that he has a drinking problem. No wonder John hits the bottle.

Rita, if you were doing your job as a loving wife instead of carrying on, maybe your husband wouldn't have hit the bottle and turned bad.

And if he was a real man, he would have taken Rita a hate ramp off the Capitol steps and put it in the kitchen where it

Mother of three hits big time — as Dolly Parton look-alike

By DICK [redacted]

Ex-factory worker Marcia Collards is an eye-popping carbon copy of curvy country singer-film star Dolly Parton.

The pretty Cleveland-born mother of three has turned her look-alike gifts into a bouncy, musical nightclub act that has audiences bug-eyed and yelling for more.

But her rewarding niche in showbiz didn't come overnight. It took a lot of hard work, determination and a bit of luck.

After Marcia, who has a dishpan bust, had entered and won 14 look-alike contests — more than anyone else in the country — she began searching desperately for some way out of an unhappy marriage.

"My husband was a college grad and busy," she told The NEWS.

"He stayed home while I went to work.

"He was also an alcoholic and he beat me. I was just praying for some way — a better way — to raise and take care of my children.

"I knew the entertainment field wasn't good for the kids so I got a divorce.

"People had always told me I looked like Dolly Parton, a twin, and winning these contests gave me the idea to put together a look-alike act.

'I've always liked to sing . . . and this act took me out of the factory . . .'

"I've always been a singer and liked to sing, and the act took me out of the factory and opened doors for me I'd never open any other way."

Last year the former assembly line worker earned an impressive $30,000 — and this year she's doing even better.

It takes Marcia two hours to get herself ready for her act, adding all the little makeup touches that spell D-O-L-L-Y.

"I have 37 wigs, so the hair isn't a problem," she explained. "It's the nails and the eyelashes that give me trouble. I put the lashes on one layer at a time. I don't like the strip lashes. They tend to peel off during my act.

More than just the dream for fame and wealth drives Marcia on as she sings eight sets a night, night after night in tourist spots across the country.

Which gal is the real Dolly? And in case you're confused, that's the real Dolly at the left. Marcia says it was winning Dolly look-alike contests that launched her career as an entertainer.

— Her 5-year-old son Richie is Marcia's main concern. But she has that worry pretty well under control, though it's not exactly an ideal situation for a little fellow to walk straight and steady.

"I've never met Dolly," she explained. "I'd really like to do that someday. I've met some of her relatives and they've helped me a lot.

"I know I will someday. So many good things have been happening to me that I just know it will happen."

Billion-to-one twins

A Hereford cow had twelve sets of twins in two — by giving birth to four consecutive sets of twins.

The Hereford, Most Amazing, is owned by Dale Nielsen of Trenton, Ohio.

"She gave birth to twin bulls in 1967," Nielsen said. "Then twin heifers in 1970, two more heifers in 1972 and the latest set a bull and a heifer were born last January.

"I doubt that a Hereford cow has ever done this before. The chance of twins being born to one cow is one in 200, but in this case you have to take 100 to the fourth power, which is 1.6 billion.

"She's a mixed cow."

Amazing psychic predicts the Oscar winners

By RAFE KLINGER

Amazing psychic Kathy Minder — who stunned the world in recent months with a series of incredible predictions — has turned her powers in on the upcoming Academy Awards.

In an exclusive interview with The NEWS, Kathy, who accurately predicted the MGM hotel fire in Las Vegas and the assassination attempt on the Pope, revealed who will win the coveted Oscars — and why.

● "Raging Bull," the screen story of boxer Jake LaMotta, will be voted best picture, but will only narrowly beat out "The Elephant Man" for the honors.

"I had a real good feeling about 'Raging Bull,'" Kathy, who lives in Chicago, said. "It has so much drama and human emotion."

● Martin Scorsese will be named best director for his work in "Raging Bull." "A lot of what went into that picture came from him," she said.

● John Hurt will be best actor for his sensitive performance as a grossly deformed man in "The Elephant Man."

"It will really be close between Hurt and Robert De Niro for 'Raging Bull,'" Kathy said. "But Hurt touched people's hearts and gave them hope."

● Mary Tyler Moore will win the best actress award for "Ordinary People," a film about a troubled teen's attempted suicide.

"That film depicted so much of what happened to her own life (Moore's son committed suicide) and it was the most serious role in her career."

● Timothy Hutton will win best supporting actor for his role as the son in "Ordinary People."

"I just feel from strength and good vibes from him. He shows a lot of potential and I feel that there's a lot of success ahead for him," said Kathy. "His role will bring him a lot of offers."

● Newcomer Cathy Moriarty will be voted best supporting actress for her performance as LaMotta's wife in "Raging Bull."

3 guards die in hail of bullets as robbers steal $1.8 million

By BILL SMITH

The armored van rolled through the drizzling April rain and eased to a stop at the rear of the Purolator Securities Inc. depot in Waterbury, Conn. It was the vehicle's last stop on its way to several New York City banks.

In the front seat that morning was moonlighting policeman Edward Cody, 45, and regular guard William West, 58.

In the rear of the van were nearly $18 million in cash, jewels and notarized checks.

The scene was now set for an armed robbery the FBI would call one of the biggest in its history.

Guard Bruce Ubert, 38, was alone inside the small depot. He pushed the button that opened the rear overhead door and the van pulled in. Clerk then stepped out of his bullet-proof office to give Cody and West a hand.

Suddenly a hail of bullets sprayed through the depot's front door. Nearly 40 bullets struck Cody in the back, crumpling him over the driver's wheel.

West pulled his revolver and turned toward the door — but a second burst ripped through his lower torso, nearly cutting him

Soon after the arrests of the four suspects the Purolator case appeared in the back pages of Connecticut newspapers.

But on Sept. 9 1978 Pelletier made a dramatic escape from the New Haven jail.

According to [illegible] jail officials, Pelletier broke through a cement grate which led to a ceiling ventilating shaft.

The shaft was apparently an [illegible] Pelletier went on a crash diet a month before he made his escape so he'd fit through the opening. He lost 40 pounds.

Less than 24 hours later, however, he was captured in a Waterbury bar.

"We got a tip on the telephone about where we could find him," one of the arresting officers said. "We don't know where the tip came from. It was probably a guy who owed him money."

After the arrests, the two women were released on bond. It is believed they will testify against their kidnapers.

The women will probably claim they were aware that the robbery would take place and drove the vans to the scene, but had no part in the actual crimes.

Key witnesses will probably be Pelletier's former girlfriend who brought the tips and if police ever locate him, a former Diablos Motorcycle Club member called "Ace," who disappeared shortly after the robbery and murders.

If the four are convicted they will be the first to face the electric chair as Connecticut enacted a new capital punishment bill was passed in 1979.

They were charged with capital murder because a police officer was killed, even though Cody was moonlighting at the time. Under the state's new legislation, the killing of a policeman is a capital crime.

"If they don't get the chair, they'll probably get life in prison," said an FBI agent.

His special [illegible] magic to the screen

John Dyer-Bennet, to critics of the best special effects men in the movie industry, has an impressive list of credits including "Moonraker" and "Raise the Titanic."

The 34-year-old Englishman modestly admits the most talked about movie sequence of all time — the sinking sight of the Titanic for which he created a 90-foot model — at the bottom of the sea.

For the "Raise the Titanic" film Richardson had a 90-foot working model of the ship built at a cost of $7 million, more than the original cost of the mighty vessel which sank on her maiden voyage in 1912.

"Much of the filming took place in a deepwater tank measuring 200-feet by 200-feet and holding more than two million gallons of water," Richardson said.

The huge model of the ship weighed 30 tons, and it was tested in a pivoting arm at the bottom of the tank. Richardson and his team spent months under the water, controlling the vessel's movements by pumping air or water into its buoyancy tanks. The huge model was raised 50 times for the cameras before the shot was considered good enough.

Explosions and battle scenes are Richardson's specialty — for "A Bridge Too Far" he used almost a ton of high explosive to some of the actual explosions.

His job can sometimes be dangerous. He was trapped underwater during the filming of "Raise the Titanic" and saved himself at the last moment — just before his air ran out.

He also had a hairy moment during the filming of "Moonraker" on location in Brazil.

"We were filming near this gigantic waterfall and Bond's powerboat got stuck right on the edge," he recalled. "I had to dangle on a line from a helicopter and free it — there was no one else who would do it for me."

Now Richardson has already started planning the special effects for his next major movie, "Tarzan."

"It's another one epic," he said. "With lots of pirates and ship-to-ship battles."

Susan Anton is sometimes jealous of short women

Q. I've heard that singer-actress Susan Anton is a tall, tall, tall 6-foot tall. I'm for a beautiful girl like her, that's got to be a problem. How does she handle it? — Mrs. Margaret Snow, Birmingham, Ala.

A. Sexy Susan towers over most women — and a lot of men. And, she admits, it's a problem sometimes — but not with her real boyfriend Dudley Moore who's only 5-feet, 2-inches tall. "The bright thing isn't a problem with us, but every now and then I feel strange about it. Like I got ... [illegible] ... singers when I see him dancing with Bo Derek in the movie '10.' She's relatively small. I was thinking, 'God, I'd love to be eye to eye with him.' I was jealous of her then. That's when I longed to be that small," says leggy Susan.

Lindsay Wagner is keeping very busy

Q. The actress that played "Bionic Woman," Lindsay Wagner, was a real beauty. I haven't seen her for a long time. What's she doing now? — Thomas West, Austin, Tex.

A. Lovely Lindsay has been very busy since her Emmy Award winning role in "Bionic Woman." Most recently, she's completed a three-hour TV drama, "Callie and Me," which is due to be released soon. Also, she's made a couple of theatrical movies, "Night Hawks" with Sylvester Stallone and "Big Bucks" with James Brolin. Actors Cotburn and Ernest Borgnine. Q. My husband and I have been arguing over whether or not Elvis Presley's real name is Elvis Presley. I told him that most entertainers change their real name to a show business name. What is Elvis Presley's real name? — Brenda Harrison, Talladega, Ala.

A. I think a lot of show business people. Elvis stuck with his name he was given at birth. On Jan. 8, 1938, Vernon Elvis Presley and his wife, Gladys, named their son Elvis Aaron Presley.

Norman Mailer says he's not cute

Q. I guess Norman Mailer is the worst male chauvinist pig anywhere. He once said he's God's gift to women. I personally think he is ugly — and I don't like the way he picked on Jacqueline in his book "Of Women and Their Elegance." What's wrong with him, anyway? — Gloria Sanford, San Antonio.

A. Plainly, admits Mailer, "I have no neck. Short legs. My chest is too large for the rest of me. And I'm proud across the pelvis." Mailer says his chest is "unsaggy and, for that matter," Arthur Miller, in the book are justified.

The book, he says, is a mock-biography that is supposed to have been written by Marilyn Monroe — and it's the way he figures Marilyn would have told the story.

"Can you imagine what my ex-wives would say about me if they got together to write a book?" asks the six-time married actor.

You are not alone in the opinion that Mailer is, at best, narcissistic. In fact, he quickly pleads guilty to those charges every time they are leveled — and, apparently, couldn't care less about the criticism.

Louie's real-life mother lands a role on TV's 'Taxi'

"Taxi's" nasty little Louie, played by Danny De Vito, introduces his mom to the rest of the gang. Danny's mama was actually played by the real-life mother Julia

By KATE KLIMAN

Danny De Vito — the pint-sized terror who plays nasty Louie on TV's standup "Taxi" — got a real thrill when it came to casting the role of Louie's mother on the show.

He real-life mom was the part.

Producers all agreed that Danny's 77-year-old mother Julia DeVito was ideal for the episode when mean Louie decides to put his mother in a nursing home.

It turned out great," said Jack Winters of Paramount TV. "They were kicking around the idea for someone to play his mother.

"Danny said: 'Who better to play my mother than my mother?'

So the company flew Julia from her home in Neptune, N.J. and she was the part.

Julia was so excited at the prospect of appearing on the show with her son, she was literally floating on a cloud.

"Look at me," she crowed after the filming of the upcoming episode. "I'm a star at 77. If I die tomorrow, I die happy."

The episode was a natural for Louie, TV's funny version of Archie Bunker.

Louie has been living with his elderly mother and happily discovers that she's the only family he has.

So the hard-hearted, hard-guy regulary has to a nursing home and then dumps her there. Louie never regrets being mean to any of the other "Taxi" regulars, but this time guilt sets in.

TV NEWS

But by the time he returns to the taxi garage he is torn with remorse. He surprises the rest of the cast by feeling like a heel and sobbing.

Finally, Alex (played by Judd Hirsch) tells Louie that there's only one thing to do — bring her back home.

Louie returns to the nursing home and finds the door to his mother's room is locked. He bangs on the door, sobbing and pleading and begging her for forgiveness.

When his mother opens the door, Louie gets the surprise of his life. She's all dressed with her suitcases packed.

She figured all along that Louie didn't have the heart to leave her there.

Danny's mother was completely thrilled by the chance to work with her son and meet the rest of the "Taxi" cast.

"She was such a pleasant lady," said Winters. "She really lights things up."

Part of the fun for the cast was watching Danny and his mother together and trying to decide if he looks like her.

"One thing's for sure," said one crew member after seeing the petite Julia. "Danny gets all his size traits his mom."

'Bosom Buddies' is a sick show and it's a danger to our children

By REX WINSTON

"Anything for a laugh. How many clowns have we heard that one?" Well, I ain't buying that tiresome excuse for sex-soaked comedy on TV anymore. "Bosom Buddies," ABC's tribute to dirtiness and perversion, has straightened me right up.

It's a proven fact that young people today imitate TV stars and try their best to be just like them. Go in any grade school and you'll hear hundreds of kids doing the Fonz' "aaaaay." Usually it's just Vaudeville-type stuff. Yesterday, every kid on the block had his own Davy Crockett coonskin cap. Before that it was Captain Video space helmets. What are we to expect from kids who watch "Bosom Buddies" — a generation of transvestites skipping down the avenue in their gay Easter bonnets?

Young people have enough trouble searching for heroes. Politicians are snatching all to jail, pitchers aren't play unless their salaries top a million, and forty men are indicted for being night at war. TV is where it's at

For those lucky enough to have invented "Bosom Buddies," here's the scoop on the show. Two guys, Kip and Henry, can't find a cheap apartment, decide to live as ladies. So they take a room at the Susan B. Anthony Hotel. The catch is, they have to dress up as ladies to qualify for the hotel's "ladies only" policy.

Each day Kip and Henry put on dresses and take on the role of the women. Once they get to work, it's back to men's clothing. Then it's back to drag for the subway ride home.

Sexy or fun to you? I like a clever sexy comedy as much as the next fellow. But gays out here were so far. I was the audience roared by one episode of "Bosom Buddies" that I covered my dog Rover's eyes.

Tonight's episode, Petrocelli Faces an opposing decision when a murder suspect asks for his help. The suspect, accused of killing a prominent columnist who was one of the lawyer's closest boyhood friends.

In the mid-'70s, lawyers were all over the tube — and Petrocelli could defend a client with the best of them. Tony Petrocelli was not only a skilled attorney with the courtroom manner, he was very much a lawyer, too.

Barry Newman played crisp Tony and established himself as a leading man in the role. Petrocelli was a top contender who proved even on the score of how Perry Mason to make a name for himself. Together with his wife Maggie, played by Sandy Dennis [illegible] Edward, Petrocelli set up house in a Malibu-beach trailer.

Many fine shows were lost in the heart of prime space cattle minority, he survived a complete overhaul. Albert Salmi was the role of Pete Risser.

Petrocelli lasted three years on TV before closing down his practice.

Although Petrocelli was a regular series from 1974 to 1976, the handsome attorney actually made his debut in 1970 in a TV movie called "The Lawyer."

. . . Now, it's your turn

Loud TV ads don't sell — they are a turnoff

I used to read reports that loud commercials were broadcast intentionally. But it happens to me that it can't be all accident all of the time.

No, I made a big mistake. I quit buying any product advertised on any station-based commercial. And that included products that had been my favorite.

But I still get mad, although I had only just bought a new TV set. I took another big step. I turned it off — and I've kept it off.

I sure had the greatest pleasure in reading and any big shots who think they are selling me something with those ear shattering commercials are dead wrong.

Where's the action?

We old folks can't go out much at night. We read a lot during the day, so how about some entertainment with action at night?

Most of the stuff on TV today — and "Mork and Mindy" is the worst. Why don't they give people at home a chance to laugh without all that pesky canned laughter?

Myrtle Smithson
Oak Hill, W. Va.

Wants nice movies

I think television is supposed to be fun. I would rather watch "Lucy" or "Tom & Jerry" than some movie about crime or drugs. Why can't there be some nice movies on television?

Vicki Rosenber,
Cairo, Ill.

Dummy producers

I often wonder how so-called TV producers ever got through the second grade. Prime time is full of goofy programs — and any program of any worth is shown in the middle of the night.

Arlene Powell,
San Diego, Calif.

Alice needs fix

Please put Flo back on "Alice." And we would love to have "The Rogers" back on "Three's Company."

Nurses charge doctors perform too many unnecessary operations

Three out of every 10 patients who [redacted] don't need surgery at all.

That's the startling opinion of nearly half the 11,358 nurses polled in a national survey that has sent shock waves through the medical community.

The poll, conducted by the respected journal of the nursing profession, RN Magazine, revealed nurses across the country believe:

• Half or more of all hospital stays are unnecessary, according to nearly a quarter of the nurses.

• Insurance companies are to blame for the high degree of hospitalization because they will pay for tests only if the patient is admitted as a hospital.

• And, an incredible 18 percent said it is their duty to inform patients of less expensive, less extreme treatments when the doctor fails to do so.

"We were really shocked that the numbers were so high," said RN editor Muriel Bardruff.

"Emphasis has now clearly shifted from protecting the doctor's reputation to protecting the patient from unnecessary surgery."

The nurses' view of the medical profession was a clear condemnation of doctors who fail to inform patients of alternatives and subject them to unnecessary risks.

"Hysterectomies led the list as the unnecessary surgery most often mentioned," Bardruff said. Some cardiac-caries and adrenaline-caries, D & C's, some cosmetic plastic operations, cholecystectomies (gall bladder removal) and some radical mastectomies were also mentioned frequently.

Amazingly, only one in five nurses who filled out the written questionnaire said certainly all surgery performed was necessary.

"There's a very surprising degree of unity of opinion across the country," Bardruff said. The NEWS. "It didn't vary by age or region, or the type of hospital where a nurse worked.

Many of the nurses said patients in for short surgery and terminal illness don't belong in the hospital.

Only 9 percent of the nurses said they saw an unnecessary hospitalization.

Schoolgirl, 10, is the youngest pro playwright

A 10-year-old schoolgirl is the world's youngest professional playwright — author of a play to be presented at England's prestigious Royal Court Theatre.

Dorian Bowman of London calls her play "Perfect Pigs" — and the theater's experts describe it as a hilarious account of a family of guinea pigs.

The characters in the play are Dora, a bossy roly-mouthed Elvira, a religious fanatic, and Edward, a dimwit.

"I could not write a serious play," says bright Dorian. "It would be too boring."

Dorian's play was selected for production by the theater after an open competition that drew as many as 100 names from throughout England.

The theater says Dorian is a deft and very professional writer.

Mom, daughter reunited after 27 long years

A mother and daughter were tearfully reunited after 27 years — thanks to the concern of a newspaper reporter.

Charlie Gabley, 50, lost her children to her husband and his family after a bitter divorce and — through the years — desperately sought to locate them.

In the interval she had remarried and raised a new family — but daily read the personals column in the Columbia, S.C., newspaper, hoping for some word from her grown-up children.

Fifteen years ago, her ex-husband brought his daughter to Columbia for a brief, one-day visit — but she never found where they lived.

As years passed the daughter, Mrs. Jeanette Eatermark, struggled to find her mother. Her dad had told her her mother was living in Charlotte, N.C., so she ran personal ads in the paper in an effort to locate her mom.

Reporter Charles Shepard of The Observer in Charlotte sensed a story and — after a long search and investigation — helped Mrs. Gabley forget near Columbia. He then called everyone with the same last name in the Columbia phone book until he located Mrs. Gabley and arranged the reunion.

A few big-headed stars are ruining our happy family, says 'WKRP' actor

By KITTY MacNAB

The prima donna egos of a few stars on TV's "WKRP in Cincinnati" are tearing apart the show's once happy cast.

Actress on the set say that the hit, centred on a startling success but had two bizarre effects a couple of cast members have either become big-headed and think they are the show — or have become crybabies and refuse to work with because their parts did not catch on with the public.

As a result some of the show's stars are demanding special treatment, shorter work weeks and refuse to follow the advice of directors.

In an exclusive interview, Frank Bonner who plays the part of Herb Tarlek and also directs some segments told The NEWS that he and other cast members have to walk lightly because of the "star egos" of a few.

"We're not the supposed family that we were the first season . . . that has changed," Bonner said. "We used to watch each other and also adlib — but it doesn't happen here.

"I can't say that nobody cares anymore. I just don't know what it is.

"Maybe people are just tired of it. Maybe they don't want to do it anymore."

Richard Sanders, who plays the show's pickled ex-newsman Les Nessman, said by email Frank's outrage about the rift that between cast members on the show.

"This season has been the fastest from the rest," he said. "We're not all where we started to be."

While the trouble has stopped short of open feuding, one cast member says there is great conflict "especially with egos."

Probably the most famous of the new crop of cast members is bombshell Loni Anderson and a source says that she has taken advantage of her fame.

Loni plays the star in the Beautiful Loni Anderson gets the star treatment from CBS. But Bonner says some other cast members are treated shabbily.

Howard Hesseman, left, has not been spoiled by success, says

The 36 year old Bonner says he has especially had trouble with cast members whom he directs and is supposed to be the boss.

"It really has separated me from people on the cast since I started directing," he said.

"I have to be careful and I walk on eggshells. I can't show my weight around and down on [illegible] or that.

"I think that all directors should compromise on what works — try different things but I sure have to pull back from that because I have to watch it.

"The major source of irritation is the special treatment some actors have given some of the stars.

"I don't think that the cast members are treated equally to the stars. Gary Sandy [illegible] as big stars as the stars — and I say stars because of the money they make compared to the others. They are treated differently and with much more attention than the rest of the cast.

"They are given time off — whenever they want it. I asked and twice and I got turned down flat.

Bonner says the one big star of the show who has not changed with success is Howard Hesseman who plays wacko disc jockey Dr. Johnny Fever.

Abraham Lincoln ... the battle against slav...

By Brand Chen

As the nation's Civil War President, Abraham Lincoln took all his great intelligence and powerful will to save one and — preserving the Union.

And because Lincoln triumphed, the United States of America still remains one indivisible nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

The 16th American President was born in a log cabin in Hardin County, Kentucky. There, on Feb. 12, 1809, Nancy Hanks Lincoln gave birth to her second child and named him Abraham.

Her husband, Tom, was a farmer and carpenter with a restless spirit.

When Abraham was barely 7, Tom uprooted his family by moving west to Indiana where Nancy died in a cholera epidemic.

During Abe's youth, Tom Lincoln decided to move his family again. This time to Illinois.

Another migration epidemic soon inspired Tom to move his family again but this little Abe stayed behind. He was old enough to be on his own, and he went to work managing a mill and general store in New Salem.

People from all over central Illinois visited the New Salem mill, and most of them looked forward to their visits with young Lincoln. When the Black Hawk War broke out, the local militia elected the young miller to lead them against the Indians.

After the war, Lincoln returned to New Salem and decided to take on leadership and say farther — he ran for the Illinois legislature.

The fledgling politician lost that election, although he won 277 of the 300 votes cast in his home precinct.

In 1834 Lincoln again ran for the legislature and this time he won. As a member of the Whig party, he served four terms in the Illinois legislature, eventually becoming the party's floor leader.

During his legislative service he met and passed the state bar exams and became a partner in a Springfield law firm.

In 1842 with his career well in hand, Lincoln finally declared his longtime sweetheart, Mary Todd.

In 1846 he was elected to Congress. However, the duties in Washington soon bored Mr. Lincoln and he disillusioned his constituents by taking a firm stand against the Mexican War, which he called unjust and unnecessary.

Lincoln was opposed slavery and the admission of any new slave states in the union. After only one term in Congress, the voters dumped him and he

$4,000 model train is powered by sun

A solar-powered model train built into a finished display is just one of the fascinating — and educational — toys you'll be available this Christmas.

The Toy Manufacturers of America recently displayed their wares, including the $4,000 train, at a show in New York.

American toy with a true ground-level log is an old-fashioned rocking horse made out of solid mahogany by the English firm of Harrods.

"The horse is made of the finest mahogany," explained company representative T. Orlando Hoop. "We've been here with it and it's sure to appreciate in value."

For the more modern child there's a motorized rocking horse. It's mounted on wheels, battery-powered and moves in forward and reverse. You can even steer it by pulling on the reins. The price — $1,000.

Slightly normal lovers will fall in love with a new line of the popular toy presented by Ed...dangered Wildlife Inc. of New York. The company specializes in stuffed animals which are on the endangered species list. It even offers cuddly stuffed tropical penguins.

For the girl collector, Madame Alexander of London, a British firm, features costumed dolls of famous historical characters.

There's a Henry VIII doll, a Teddy Roosevelt doll and even a rare Ronald Reagan model, dressed in a remembrance reminiscent of the tuxedo he wore at his inauguration.

But there is no Jimmy Carter doll.

"We're a corporate doll manufacturer and Jimmy just didn't dress well enough," scoffed Jack Wilson, the company's vice-chairman.

The biggest-selling toys this Christmas are topped by computerized games, played on a perfect sized board.

Children's teeth disintegrate after swimming in town's pool

A town's swimming pool seems to be eating away the teeth of kids who are swimming in it.

Officials in Clark, N.J., deny that the pool is the cause of the problem but parents and dental experts don't agree.

Dr. Elihu Sweet says that he's eliminated every other potential cause for the teeth damage and he blames the town pool.

After a month of swimming in it, he says the children's teeth look like a set of "half-eaten hotdogs."

"If someone told me this could happen I wouldn't have believed it," he said. But it is no different from other pools. They say they put the same common pool chemicals in it that everyone else uses — chlorine and acid.

State authorities are scratching their heads to solve the mystery.

Dr. Sweet discovered the first case of stripped enamel, and then he asked the dentists of 10 other children who used the pool to call him.

"All these children had the same kind of damage," Dr. Sweet said. He said a "rash of circumstances" points to the pool as the culprit.

"Children who used the pool complained of pains in their muscles. They said they couldn't eat for hours after using the pool. They complained of burning gums and eyes and skin rashes.

"They said they needed goggles to swim in the pool," Dr. Sweet said.

Grizzly bears sue to protect forest

Twenty grizzly bears have joined to stop cutting operations that endanger their homeland.

The bears were listed as plaintiffs on the suit filed by environmental groups who want to stop logging in the Kootenai National Forest in Montana.

But a spokesman, spokesman for the Wilderness Society in Denver, said the bears are a symbol to show the threat cutting is to animals.

But says government efforts to help bears damage aren't enough to save the bears.

Taxpayers buy $7G in gifts for rich execs

Some free-spending bureaucrats have blown nearly $7,000 in taxpayers' money on fake leather notebooks for well-heeled savings and loan association executives — many of who tossed the notebooks into the trash can.

This ridiculous waste has earned the Government National Mortgage Association — better known as "Ginny Mae" for its acronym GNMA — a blast from Senator William Proxmire and six fresh recruits in Golden Fleece award.

"GNMA spent $6,976 to buy 1,000 simulated leather binders which it sent out in savings and loan books to commemorate the issue of $100 billion in mortgage-backed securities," Proxmire said.

The whole thing left the taxpayer in the bind, he noted. They had to pick up the tab.

"It is ridiculous," he fumed.

But GNMA officials say the expense was justified. Accordingly to a letter from Ginny Mae's president that accompanied the gifts, the phony leather binders were sent "to thank (executives who conceptualized and shaped the program . . ."

The senator said that the notebooks were not only wasteful but in questionable taste.

"Printed on the maroon colored imitation leather folder in imitation gold lettering were these words: 'Government National Mortgage Association commemorates one hundred billion dollars in mortgage-backed securities,'" he said.

The specially decorated notebooks have no practical value, says Proxmire. "What could be done with it?" he asks.

"The simple answer is that hundreds of them were directly into the round file beneath the desks of presidents and vice presidents of the 1,200 associations who got them," he said.

Cops say they're powerless as 'kiddie crime wave' sweeps U.S.

By RICK DONOVAN

Police in cities, towns and villages across America are desperately trying to stem a shocking new wave of murders, rapes, robberies and thefts — committed by children!

And discouraged cops say they are losing the battle against the kiddie crime wave, because the "new breed" of child criminals today know they can break the law and get away with it.

"The whole country was shocked when a cute little 9-year-old walked into a New York bank and pulled a stickup," Chicago police officer Jay Schroeder told The NEWS.

"But it didn't shock police agencies. We have been dealing with juvenile criminals for years.

"Sure, it's unusual when a 6-year-old pulls a bank job. But that's only the tip of the iceberg. Under the surface that iceberg is a mass of street wise kids who commit murder, rape, robberies, burglaries, grand theft and auto theft. You name it and they do it."

The police spokesman's "shocking" bank holdup was committed by a 9-year-old boy, identified only as Robert, who took $110 at gunpoint from a teller at the New York Savings Bank in Manhattan.

The bravado 4-foot-3 inch tyke later surrendered to the FBI, saying that he was only "playing a game."

But "Robert" is only the cutest, most publicized colorful in a dark breed of criminal — little Hoodlum — who are deadly dangerous in society because the law can seldom deal with them.

Here are some of the most brutal crimeouts who have made the headlines in recent months:

• The brutal murder of a wealthy and married Chicago business executive was committed by three sex maniac girls, the youngest only 11.

• The vicious murder of a New York policeman involved a 16-year-old gunman and his 15-year-old accomplice.

• A 13-year old Brooklyn boy with 33 arrests was subject for attempted murder and later confessed to 200 felonies.

• Midwestern police arrested three boys and a girl aged 7 to 10 for the brutal beating death of an 80-year-old invalid woman.

Police and juvenile officers each year arrest thousands of boys and girls under age 18 for major felonies. But they are quick to point out that most of thousands of other crimes go unreported.

"The figures speak for themselves," said Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola. "The kids are getting worse than the adults. There was a time when an classified juvenile crime as 'truancy.' Now we call it murder, robbery and rape."

A kiss in time saves her hubby from watery grave

A kiss the kiss saved Rodrick Long from crashing to his death after a bridge gave way and plunged him an icy, fast running creek.

His wife Geri had dropped him off at the foot of the picketty, wooden-footed bridge so he could walk the rest of the way to work.

Suddenly he remembered he hadn't kissed her goodbye. He stopped dead in his tracks and ran back before she could drive away.

Once back on the bridge, he walked 30 feet before he heard a terrible cracking sound. Then the floor gave way and with a heart-stopping roar plummeted into the water.

But surrendously, the section Roderick was on held fast.

"If I hadn't gone back to kiss Geri, I would be dead for sure," he told The NEWS. "Even two steps would have made a difference."

Simple $5 blood test will be able to detect cancer

A simple blood test costing $5 or £3 is being developed to find cancer and pinpoint its location in the body.

Dr Frank J Rauscher of the American Cancer Society said much progress has been made in recent months to develop the life-saving test.

"We hope we will soon have a $5 or £3 blood test which not only tells the physician if the patient has cancer but points to the body that cancer is in extent, he said.

"We will be able to treat the patient with drugs or X-rays and then treatment will be aimed directly at the cancer.

"For the first time we can use a rifle instead of a shotgun for treating cancer victims."

Dr Rauscher also said there will soon be enough machines around to carry testing to local surgeries and hospitals.

False teeth can cause allergies

You may be allergic to your false teeth. That ruling bit of medical news comes from Dr John Combe who said a 67-year-old woman called in the Tufts New England Medical Center complaining of difficulty in sleeping and swallowing. She also had a burning sensation in the roof of her mouth.

She had acquired a new set of dentures a week before. Dr Combe found and a resin used in their manufacture had been improperly cured.

So he boiled the teeth in a pressure cooker for 30 minutes to remove the resin, had them all properly re-cemented, and gave the patient a mouth rinse to reduce her pain.

Hormone to halt aging

A top doctor claims it's possible to prevent breast cancer and aging in women by giving them the hormones produced abundantly by the body in youth and sparingly in old age.

Dr Arthur Schwartz of Temple University identified the two hormones as DHEA and DHEA-sulfate, produced by the adrenal glands. "They have an known biological function," he said, "but they seem to delay the onset of aging and the cancers like cancer."

Dr Schwartz said that hormone production in the aged may drop to 10 percent of that in young people, and that women of the show low levels of DHEA are breast cancer risks.

Cigarettes can damage cells

A single puff of cigarette smoke can damage a lot of blood cells and such damaged cells can make a person more apt to develop lung cancer.

Prof R.J. Evans of a cell research laboratory in Edinburgh, Scotland, reported that smokers have many more damaged cells than the non-smokers.

And, he adds, it takes only one puff to produce large numbers of damaged cells.

Painless dentistry

Two Japanese scientists have come up with a spray-on solution that eliminates dental drilling and painlessly gets rid of tooth decay.

Minutes after application to a decayed area, the chemical causes it to disintegrate and crumble away, leaving a cavity ready to be filled.

Scientists at Tufts University School of Dental Medicine are refining the process.

Thousands across nation using Ohio man's sure-fire way to get rich quick

Are you an Ohio 9-day working person? Do you have debt or no savings in the bank? Are you in debt with mortgages, car payments and charge accounts? Do you have little experience in anything except the small specialty of your job?

If you've answered "yes" to all these questions, you are a prime candidate for a foolproof get rich quick system developed by a working man from Canton, Ohio. His name is Benjamin Sweet and he was in your exact same position not long ago. But, he changed all that by inventing a get rich quick system designed especially for the working man.

How did this system come about? You probably already know about Mr Sweet's deal his system. And so his system, and many others Mr Sweet have appeared on nearly every major newspaper and magazine in the country. Thousands of people across the nation have purchased the system and the reports of success from satisfied customers received by Mr Sweet are overwhelming.

Mr Sweet's did not develop his system overnight. But he finally achieved success extremely short periods of time.

Mr. Sweet's first successful system earned him $50,000 alone. What's it like to get $50,000 almost overnight or one lump sum?

"It's almost impossible to describe. My wife and I just stared at the check for a long time. We had a real fine celebration with a dinner and party. Then I went back to work and told my boss, who thought he had me under his thumb, where he could stuck his low paying, lousy job. Next we paid off all our bills including our home mortgage and had a have-to-mortgage party.

The following day we went to an automobile showroom and had three cash for a new luxury car. I never had the experience of a new car even as a child."

"Then my wife and I went on a shopping spree for clothes. We had been making do with old clothes for so long that they had become worn out. We almost had to shop for clothes with very little money. I always joked with her that 'If I gave you $1,000 to spend on clothes would you do it in one day?' She used to say 'I could do it in a couple hours.' So that's what I did. I gave her $1,000 to go out and buy clothes. It ended up taking all day and she said the saleslady every minute."

"Finally we took a long trip to New York. I bought her a large diamond at Tiffany's — another thing we always dreamed about."

"But I can tell you that the money was not the most important benefit in this. What money really does is give you freedom time. Time to be with your kids and children before they grow up before you know it — and time to do things you really want to do. Another definite thing you get is peace and respect. You sense awakening and knowing [illegible] you're dependent. The people at Dennis Sweet's group tell that says a lot."

Benjamin Sweet

How much money can you make with your own get rich quick system? Well, one of the Sweet's averages around $200,000 for each system he produces. He says doing a system in under 100 days or 120,000 is certainly don't stop. "I have three systems in my of the runs and don't even sell them," he says.

How can you make money? the Sweets point "I am not talking about making thousands of years from now. I am talking about right now. I taught my younger brother and brother-in-law the system and they've already made over $200,000 each. All you need is the ability to follow simple directions, common sense and the ability to use a job through to completion."

This system is the perfect for people who are confined to homes, such as housewives. Mr Sweet dubbed his system "7 Steps to Freedom". He has been selling his system to others for a year now. The reason? "Why not?" he says. "First I thought I'd have to keep a secret. But then I found out the system can't be monopolized on why not sell it and make money by selling the system on top of the other money I am making using it."

People from every state in the union have purchased Mr. Sweet's system. What do these people have to say? Here are just a few testimonials.

"... It is such an excellent product that anyone who can read and follow instructions can be a millionaire ..." — William J. Hassinger, Peoria, IL

"... This is the first time I have purchased a "get rich" product that I sincerely feel will work." — Earl J. Dove, Chicago, IL

"... Advertisers whose names describe the hidden wealth After many years, much money and a full-half of frustration, I believe I have finally got lucky once, and got I don't want it." — John T. Vaughn, Nonrefrigerants, Ga

"I have just received your system and have taken it to college. It has really helped some professors especially the free and low parts..." — Mark Kimble, Rockhill, SC

A word to the doubting Thomases. Of course there will be those who will doubt that the system is for real. Mr. Sweet has banked the system to many over newspaper in the country and he has sold his system to thousands of people across the nation and in every state of the union. The story has been checked repeatedly by newspaper reporters and government authorities at literally every level. The story checks out. Every word in has stated about his system is true so he wouldn't have one of business long ago.

You can make $100,000 or a million of dollars or more. In some cases money starts to flow. Here's how it works...

1 You will receive Mr. Sweet's system in the mail which explains everything you need to complete one of your own systems. From explains, such as your location, order, you complete the preliminary steps. This involves filling out provided forms and following provided instructions.

2 The preliminary steps of the system are done only one time. After these preliminary steps, you are on the steps for each individual system operations, these your home, while you are working, play. Income from the individual systems in his investment or from a investor expenses your hours, by following outlines and doing out forms, you complete your individual systems (each of which is in one piece, Part A and Part B).

3 After completing Part A and Part B of the system, depending on the type of system you do, you may either place it (Parts A and B of your individual system, or you keep it in the mail in the type of envelope which you placed in Parts A and B. you will literally complete a system and shipment and have immediate money in your hands the very next morning.

4 In a matter of days or weeks, depending upon many factors you do, you are further benefits for each system. In some cases, over 50% of the money will be in your possession or less than a week. Your checks will either be deposited in your bank account or brought to you by mail to your home or your vacation spot.

But those who wish to purchase the [illegible] system must [illegible] TO [illegible] as a favor distributed by mail only for the present. Mr. Sweet has kept the price of the system low so those who need need it the most a

Doc says you [illegible] recall the details of your own birth

If you have a hard time even remembering where you put the car keys this morning, you're in for a surprise.

You can remember being born, says a top psychologist.

Dr David Chamberlain, head of the Anxiety Treatment Center in San Diego, Calif., has hypnotized over 100 years of mothers and children.

Amazingly, he discovered the children recalled in mixing detail events surrounding their birth that they mothers never told them — right down to whether the doctor was gruff or pleasant, whether labor was difficult even what they were home from the hospital.

"We started with 10 mother and child pairs as experiments to prove reliability of the memory and they were hypnotized separately and independently," Dr Chamberlain said.

The children ranged in age from nine to 23, with the average age 15.

"When I heard the first reports, I was flabbergast. Children could recall such things as the mother's hairstyle, the obstetric instruments used, conversation in the delivery room.

"As I expanded the research to 100 pairs over five years, I found one it was therapeutically important every time to be [illegible] there back that far because [illegible] and mental problems do go back to the womb."

Unknown to Chamberlain, another doctor, obstetrician Dr. David Chen of San Francisco, Calif., was discovering the exact same phenomenon — he had been hypnotizing patients for 20 years and had found that children do recall life before and at birth.

"When we put the stories of the mothers and children together to compare, we found that they did match — there were up to 15 points. Intimate details, where mother and child were telling the very same stories," Chamberlain said.

"For example, in one report she is what the mother said: 'After delivery they put her on my stomach and they're still talking so is hot and they tell me she's a girl.'

"The child, hypnotized separately, says: 'They put it (himself) on us for stomach. The doctor's shaky, nervous. He's talking to my mom, telling her I'm a girl and everything seems to be okay.'

"In another case, the mother is recalling bringing the baby home from the hospital. She says: 'She's wearing soft blue pink pants and top that has little rainbows down the front.

"The 15-year-old girl says, 'They're bringing me home from the hospital and I'm wearing an outfit and it's got little pink flowers.'"

Chamberlain believes the mind retains information that belongs from the first second it enters "on."

"It's not like the brain which develops and grows. The brain is a physical thing. The mind is not.

"It's an all-or-nothing proposition," the psychologist said.

"I don't believe all problems begun at birth. Birth doesn't have to be a problem if it's handled right.

"But we make a lot of mistakes and babies have quite a story to tell."

Chamberlain's research has appeared in medical journals and he has appeared on television shows.

Burglar dozes off in victim's house

A burglar couldn't wait to enjoy the loot so he drank a bottle of booze, passed out and was dead asleep when his victims came home.

Deputy Sheriff Clyde French of Los Angeles says Willie Landis, 31, was found asleep in the house with two pillow cases full of loot and an empty whisky bottle beside him.

The unintended homeowner called cops who came over and woke Willie up and gave him the bad news that he was on his way to jail.

My divorced boyfriend is afraid he will get burned again

Dear Babe: Six years ago I fell in love with a married man and I have been with him ever since.

He was divorced a year ago and we see a lot of each other. He says he loves me but not enough to marry me.

He says he does not want to hurt me as we don't talk about marriage.

I have to be careful not to make him think I am pressuring the marriage but I don't want to lose him.

I think about him all the time and I know he cares other wise.

I'm so confused up. What can I do to get and keep his love?

Deeply in love
Johnson City, Tenn.

Dear Deeply: Many people are unfortunately hurt by a divorce. It isn't unusual that your friend is shy of remarrying herself again after the painful experience he's been through.

My guess is he may still be torn between you and his former home so he resorts from the hurt. He will appreciate your devotion and when the time is right, he will make the decision to try again based on the relationship you've had during the past difficult period.

You're spread thin, as shy to relax and not enjoy the relationship. If it's meant to be, it will be.

Also, most of all, play it cool.

Don't make it necessary for him to pressure you. Try to show him by your own way that you're not the kind to be pressured unfortunately. As you grow older, you will have more opportunity to stand up for your beliefs.

When you are ghosted up, you will have the opportunity to handle your own children to look for the good in people.

Mom and step-dad are hateful racists

Dear Babe: I am a 15 year old girl of half Mexican descent. My parents don't like Mexicans and tell me terrible stories of horrible things they've done.

I like a Mexican boy at school and I told my mom about it. She told my step-dad and he grounded me and said that I can't like Mexicans.

When I tried to tell them things are different now he tells me to shut up. What can I do? I think they are wrong.

Mixed Up
Bakersfield, Calif.

Dear Mixed Up: To judge people because of their color or background is wrong. Don't antagonize them or dad by arguing with them. Try to show them by your own way that you're not the kind to be pressured unfortunately. As you grow older, you will have more opportunity to stand up for your beliefs.

When you are ghosted up, you will have the opportunity to handle your own children to look for the good in people.

Nasty ex-girlfriend drives my lover nuts

Dear Babe: My boyfriend has been accused by an old girl friend of two crimes he did not commit. She is so jealous that she is trying to keep him. He has been arrested for rape and drug charges, but was released by the police when they found no evidence to back up these charges.

Now her new boyfriend is harassing him by firing guns shots through the windows and slashing his door with a knife. My boyfriend is now so afraid of this violence that he won't go out.

I try to soothe him but the steady attack on his nerves has driven him nearly insane. I really care for this guy and I don't want to lose him, but I don't know how I can help. Even the police can't stop the problem.

Scared and upset
Woodward, Okla.

Dear Scared: The rage of insane jealousy usually vanishes with time. I said usually, but there are cases of extreme brooding such as this.

I suggest if you and he are ready to move and can't tolerate the threats, that you leave the area. If you may, it could all blow over, but it might not.

If police won't put a stop to all this, have sensible moving help together and moving trucks also where the motion when you give up is worth your boyfriend's peace of mind and healing of nerves.

If I move out of town I'll lose him

Dear Babe: I am in and in love with a boy I met five months ago. Our love is very mature and beautiful but we seem destined to make the pain which divorce. I will never see my boyfriend again. I can't bear to stay on my own because of the high cost of living. What should I do?

Mixed-up
N. Laguna, Calif.

Dear Mixed-Up: Many people have similar problems as yours. It has been experience that those years, although seemingly exhilarating, usually result in

Pesky girls at school make fun of me & make my life miserable

Dear Babe: I have several girls in school that I can't handle. We have to take showers and then to go to our lockers and I feel so embarrassed standing there naked.

The other girls and I just join in and also make fun of how ugly they are.

When I eat lunch some girls go through my purse while I am in the lunch line and take things from it. My hands are small and my other clothes are too big.

What can I do to be left alone and not have these girls make fun of me?

Lonely person.
Mineral Springs, Pa.

Dear Lonely Person: From your letter, I would guess that you are about 10 or 11, so I can understand how serious you take these problems. As your age, things like showing bodies in a common shower and having your hair "look funny" are matters of great concern. I don't tell this person that "beauty" is you right now so here's what I think you should do.

Have some of the teachers a new rule that if you can change or have a private shower after P.E. Get yourself a purse with a comfortable shoulder strap and carry it while you are in the lunch line. For your hands, there are many products which can get that will eliminate the problem of chapped hands.

Most of all, try to ignore the other girls. Never let them think you are hurt by saying ugly things back. Instead, try to say nice things to them no matter what they do.

He's 36, I'm 16 and very confused

Dear Babe: I am 16 and I am going with a guy who is 36. I like him a lot and he's sweet and nice to know. He is a singer and I help him out by trying to arrange concerts and benefits.

Do you think I am wrong to like a man so much older than I am? What can I do to get more of his attention?

In Love,
Birmingham, Ala.

Dear In Love: Right or wrong depends on your point of view. In this case of age differences are the same and there have been relationships between men and women with a wider separation in age than you.

However, the odds for a successful loving relationship are not good. Between 16 to 36 when a girl's heart is hungry for love and their attention and commitment common sense to look.

I think you should evaluate your situation very carefully and decide what you want from life. In my experience, girls your age have never with men closer to their own age because older men's interests are at a level that few young girls can keep with their limited experience.

I advise you to strongly consider forgetting this man and seek friends closer in your age.

Then the resident of Sherman, Wyo., settled down to wait for death's icy touch.

ARIES

Mar. 21-Apr. 19

Much as you hate to admit it, you need another's help, Aries. A situation this week forces you to put pride aside. You'll be pleasantly surprised at the results because you'll not only accomplish what needs to be done, but you'll reward a fine friendship.

Phone bills have soared this week. Get that cluttered desk organized or those money files in order.

TAURUS

Apr. 20-May 20

A positive mood change may make you want to pull the sheets over your head and hide from the world. Don't dare! Taurus! The best way to overcome that adjust-from-the-world feeling is to jump up, call a friend, make plans to do something fun.

You'll snag one of the lines so completely you'll be so absorbed in unraveling what perhaps a child fashioned rather than seeing.

GEMINI

May 21-June 20

Your spirit of adventure is still bursting with the sale of you that shows up at the office 10 minutes early every morning. You're ready for a vacation. Then an alluring exotic trip and, for sure, dear Gemini, forget about the penny a call cost.

This is no time to go all dewy when you really want to do the good to yourself. You'll loosen up and others will feel drawn to you for it.

CANCER

June 21-July 22

You feel very close to home this week. Action and it's a good idea to stay there. Loved ones need special attention and a mini-crisis with children or parents needs your calm management.

Dine you're all through smoothing ruffled feathers, treat yourself to a pleasant diversion. Avoid any long-distance travel if possible, though short trips could be profitable.

LEO

July 23-Aug. 22

You've been unruly, Leo, making a decision on your own that will affect those close to you and then you hate to face their wrath. No wonder they're angry — it was typical, but not very thoughtful, for you to plan everything without consulting them.

Leave your house well. Make it up by agreeing to do everything the way they want it.

VIRGO

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

With everything you touch turning to gold these days, lucky Virgo, you will be tempted to sign on the dotted line for a deal that sounds too good to be true. It is. Do your look and proceed slowly.

The rest of your life continues to be smooth sailing. Your personal relationships bloom. Kiss shy when you ask them to do something. And even your appliances please baby you. Still on!

LIBRA

Sept. 23-Oct. 22

Fans an fanning you, you're been getting off, Libra, as you are in a high work cycle this week. Direct energy toward goals, leave romance for another day.

You'll find yourself burning the midnight oil and still awakening early with energy to spare. You'll be the envy of those around you as you zip through chores with the ease of an Olympic star reaching tracks.

SCORPIO

Oct. 23-Nov. 21

With your renewed energy this week, Scorpio you'll take an interest in a new hobby. It may be arts and crafts, but chances are it will take you by complete surprise — a right course that suddenly strikes your fancy, a do-it-yourself kit declares that comes in the mail!

Don't ignore your health. A long walk will do wonders for you. A new exercise program will fill the bill.

SAGITTARIUS

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Restless Sagittarian, you're going to have trouble concentrating once as you'll find dreamily on the window longing for something, but you can't quite figure out what.

Don't settle for dreams. Assess your life and figure out what's missing. Then go for it with all the gusto you can. But complete the commitments. A decision now could have lasting impact.

CAPRICORN

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

After all the interruptions of the past few weeks, you welcome a return to routine and you'll have long stretches of time to work uninterrupted. You may even return to the office on Saturday.

While all is going smoothly, dear Capricorn, don't upset the equilibrium by taking on projects that will demand a lot of time. Let your tasks out of the way and you'll hear a giant sigh of relief.

AQUARIUS

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Your sense of adventure feels thwarted now as business details seem to take all your time. You feel as frustrated you're ready to blow your stack.

Spend lots of time with loved ones and encourage them to open up and share their hopes and dreams. Find a sport or hobby you can enjoy with someone close.

ELTON JOHN
MARCH 25, 1947
ARIES

Elton John, that high-stepping rock 'n' roller will be 34 this week. Elton was born in Middlesex, England, under the sun sign of Aries.

He has a very diversified chart spread out over eight different signs. This makes Elton a many-sided personality who is extremely difficult to know well. His love of costumes shows his need to express all the different characters inside himself.

A very accurate aide is evident with Jupiter in Scorpio. Elton loves to discover other people's secrets. He also has a couple of strange secrets of his own that he keeps locked up inside.

His eccentric nature indulges in living on a whim and he is known to cultivate some weird friends.

Elton loves power, including the power of privilege, money and a very charisma. He is capable of backstabbing anyone, though he usually prefers staying loyal to his friends.

With his sun in Aries and Jupiter in Scorpio his need for drama is extremely high. He must live, daily even, a dramatic life filled with intrigue in order to not be the least bit bored. He creates his own drama and intrigue if there are none. This is important for him, emotionally and psychologically, and through it all he manages to stay the center of attention.

With Saturn in Leo, Elton may experience heart disease problems later in life. This influence also makes it difficult for him to express deep, caring emotions to those he loves.

Taurus male — Gemini female

This guy undoubtedly will have more trouble figuring this girl than most of his female buddies.

She is moving in too many directions at too fast a speed for this Virgo lad to keep track of or care about.

To begin with, she plays too many games and he doesn't want to play games, unless he's sure he will win. Her fickle unpredictable ways will probably confuse him and make him so mad that after meeting her he may never be the same again.

It's true. She is searching for the right man but when you have two, three or four different women all in the same body things get mighty strange.

No doubt this Taurus will be confused. One second she's the sweet darling amigo — the next she's a harpy.

For the Taurean male stability is nine-tenths of life. He is looking for a "Woman of the Year" and hopes she will match the portrait of his mother: puritanical, super clean, super honest. No perversions. The Gemini girl is unforgivable. breaks down all taboos including necrophilia and other complicated machines, and sends perambulators and psychologists downing hair tonic and cleaning irons.

These two were never meant to be. They have very little in common emotionally, spiritually or even jokingly.

No sense in pretending. This is generally not a good relationship. Those who have gone 15 years are either ready for Purple Hearts or strait jackets.

Sexy 'It's a Living' star tells how she battles extra weight

Sexy TV starlet Ann Jillion says she wants to trim some pounds off her curvaceous shape.

By DON SAXON

Sizzling TV starlet Ann Jillion, whose jiggly figure livens up the TV show "It's a Living," has an embarrassing secret — she's overweight.

The nancy blonde was almost reduced when she confessed to The NEWS that her weakness for eating has gotten the better of her.

"I happen to love food," Ann purred, "and I'm an adventurous eater. If I overdo it in the eating department, I put on weight immediately.

"Right now, my goal is to lose some extra weight and get down to 118. When I started on the show, I was a size Ten. Now, I'm down to an Eight and am aiming for size Six."

While most male viewers might not agree with Ann's disappointment over her shape, the 5-foot-4 portrait of sex appeal is so upset that she's cut back on her meals and is taking grueling dance classes three times a week.

"I don't like to jog. I tried it with my husband when attempting to get ready for the 'Battle of the Network Stars.'

"But the only thing jogging did for me was to jiggle me around," Ann giggled.

"I can't imagine it being any good when it only ratchets everything up inside you."

Ann may be worried about her weight, but 'Playboy' magazine isn't. They've offered her big money to pose.

"I've never done nudes," says Ann, "and I never will. 'Playboy' has pleaded with me to do a nude, but I don't think that's possible. After all, my husband (ex-cop Andy Muniz) wouldn't care for that kind of exposure and my parents certainly would be offended."

Ann has become one of the hottest young actresses in Hollywood, but her popularity has forced her to turn down many juicy roles.

"I turned down a couple of Burt Reynolds films recently," she said.

"Burt wanted me for his picture 'Cannonball.' I happened to be guesting on 'Love Boat' at the time and couldn't get free to appear.

"Then three weeks later, Burt's agent called me for the female lead in 'Paternity.'

"The day they began the movie, I was doing this show ('It's a Living') and had to reject it.

"I wrote a letter to Burt saying, 'God love you for asking me to be in two of your films. If you don't ask a third time, I'm going to commit suicide.'"

Ann says she realizes that her figure plays a big part in her TV series, but she says she's careful not to show too much.

He uses bear fat to make forecasts

Gordon Wimmett has a wacky way of forecasting the weather — he studies jars of bear grease to see if it's going to rain or snow.

Gordon's nearby neighbors in Cloudcroft, N. Mex., laugh at his jars and jokingly call him "The Bear Grease Kid."

But the 56-year-old ex-cattle land developer says his weather forecasting method is the same one used by the Indians for hundreds of years.

"I got it from a state game warden back in the '30s," he recalls.

The warden had killed a bear, rendered the fat and poured it in jars. Then he showed Gordon and some others how to read the grease.

"My immediate reaction was 'Ha, ha,'" says Gordon.

But he tried it and was stunned to find that it worked. Gordon became so intrigued by the method that he researched it and found it was once used by the Anasazi and Apache Indians of the southwest.

They would smear animal bladders clean so they could see through them and then pour in the grease.

Gordon uses bear grease, but has found that other animal oils will also show the change of moisture in the air.

Cigarette users are losing smoking battle

Professor Kenneth Warner of the University of Michigan says government and private campaigns against smoking have had a tremendous impact.

While many claim that the anti-smoking ads have had little effect, Warner says that without them Americans would be smoking 46.8 percent more cigarettes now.

The nonsmokers' rights movements which first began in 1971 have even caused some states to increase taxes on cigarettes, he noted.

That's right, Christine Jorgensen has become a cabaret singer and she's been belting out the songs nightly since her act opened in New York City.

Cops brighten loneliest man's life

Hard-nosed cops opened their hearts to brighten the final years of the loneliest man in the world.

And when Bobby Van Hook, a police department janitor, died the saddened cops gave him a full hero's funeral — complete with huge police escort.

Bobby was a lonely, uncomplaining, hardworking little guy who walked with a stoop because of painful arthritis and back trouble.

He was a man without a family — except for the cops who unofficially adopted him and gave him a hero's funeral when he died of a heart attack.

"He may very well have been the loneliest man in the world," said Sgt. Richard Kall of the Des Moines, Iowa, Police Department.

The words spoken by the minister at Bobby's funeral brought tears to the cops' eyes.

"He was not an influential citizen and had no family . . . He had an apparent education . . . He lived a life of poverty. And yet Bobby Van Hook was more influential than the wealthiest executive of a corporation. Bobby Van Hook had more to say by his life than all the gold and glitter of a rampant consumer society. For Jesus identifies with the poor, the lonely, the least of beings . . ."

Bobby got a very fancy funeral for a man who didn't even own a suit to be buried in. He got the works — a full honor funeral complete with police escort. He got a car. Twelve squad cars and two motorcycles escorted his hearse. Six uniformed policemen carried his casket.

"Cops have a reputation for being hard-nosed and tough because we see some of the worst elements in society — the bums, the criminals, the people who were looking for a handout," observed Sgt. Kall.

"Bobby wasn't like that.

"He came into our lives 12 years ago when he got a part-time job in the department as a janitor. What we knew about him we had to pry out in bits and pieces over the years.

"When he was 2 or 3 years old, he was put in an orphanage by his mother. He was reared in orphanages and institutions all over Iowa and was once even mistakenly put in an insane asylum."

Bobby spent the last two years of his life in and out of the hospital. "He had a bad heart, arthritis and was in constant pain," said Sgt. Kall. "Yet he worked until he simply wasn't able. He never complained. He never asked for a handout.

"A week before Christmas in 1979 I asked Bobby what he would be doing over the holiday period.

"'What I always do,' he said. 'Get up, go to work, go home.'"

Sgt. Kall invited Bobby to his home on Christmas Day. The Kall children gave Bobby a wrapped present.

"The little guy looked disbelieving," Sgt. Kall recalled.

"He took the present, read the words, 'Happy Christmas, Bobby' — and burst into tears. He cried like a baby. We tried to get him to open the package, but he wouldn't. 'It's the first present I've had in 30 years,' he said. 'I don't want to open it.'"

It rained the day of Bobby's funeral, said Sgt. Kall.

But when the funeral procession reached the cemetery, the rain suddenly stopped and the sun burst through.

"It was a bittersweet ending to the story of Bobby Van Hook," said Sgt. Kall.

When Bobby died police gave him hero's funeral
